American fast food now draws heavily from Mediterranean cuisine, using ingredients like wheat, olives, and lamb. Seems pretty nice actually, and I'm guessing the obesity rate is quite a bit lower in the Imperium.

Khoronzon originated as a cult in 22nd-century Russia. It took advantage of an unspecified societal crisis to expand its power throughout most of Eurasia sometime between the 22nd and 24th centuries, usurping the existing governments of the region as they collapsed.

In their timeline, the Americas were first discovered by Zheng He in the 1420s. Contact and trade between East Asia and Mesoamerica ensued, but there was no colonization until later in the century. The Spanish eventually discovered Tenochtitlan as well, which set off a four-way power struggle between China, Japan, Spain, and the Aztecs, which was ultimately won by China. A Chinese diaspora settled in Mexico in the centuries after, which molded the culture into its modern blend of Chinese and Mesoamerican aspects.

Godulan culture has amazingly high numbers of neo-nazi esque dissident groups. Nobody truly knows why there were so many Neo-nazis, but a civil war that lasted for entire centuries happened because of them (The neo-nazis). Thanks to this, anyone who is a neo-nazi is not looked down upon nicely in Godular.

~~She has done the unforgivable crime of having a WIP factbook~~

The Inkings actually fought in their world's version of WW2. This gives me the mental image of little squid girls yelling 'WOOMY' as they land in Normandy while getting shot at by MG42. However, in reality, the Inkings major play in the second world war was naval combat rather than land/air fighting. (At least, as I can see thusfar given the WIP status of the factbook).

Spain was also forcefully involved by the Inkings, as they declared war on Fascist Spain around the same time as Nazi Germany.

In this timeline, Ireland is its world's equivalent of the Netherlands. It among other things has a colonial empire stretching throughout the world, with control over OTL New England, and some amount of influence over the 16th century world.

Note: Many factbooks are in a constant state of WIP or being considered for entire rework or deletion

It is not, in fact, made up of five massive megacities that more or less cover all of Australia; instead, it's named after five of its cities which are especially notable and culturally significant.

They appear to be comprised of mostly south asian nations, a goodly chunk of the middle east, and GREENLAND because tacos.

Also, they appear to have a bit of dimensional confusion. We can fix that, though from the oddly gobsmacked look on the face of the guy who married a lamia, there are some entertaining interminglings a-goin' on.

Due to the nature of Godulans themselves and the technology they bear, it is completely possible for a Godulan to reproduce with pretty much everything within reasonable limits and maybe even some things out of those limits.

Kal'Shazzar isn't a weird alien bug-looking thing. Without looking at Godular's factbooks, I always figured he'd look something like how Sarathress looks. He isn't exactly a human either, though, he's more of an extremely intelligent demigod thing. Also, his brilliance was temporarily stalled when the Godulans "adjusted" his brain to integrate him into their society.

Ninja'd: the Synnian capital of Ancypastan (which may or may not be a pun on Ancapistan) is a very clean city thanks to sanitation nanites automatically recycling any litter, and its inhabitants go to relatively great lengths to protect themselves from bullets despite a low crime rate because every now and then people decide to "simulate urban warfare".

There is a large number of people in Khoronzon known as 'underlings', which are not necessarily subordinates as the name in its typical usage might suggest but are rather members of an inferior social strata, comparable to a caste. They comprise approximately 35% of Khoronzon's population, compared to the remaining population have a very low literacy rate, and have essentially no access to internet, telephone, and television infrastructure.

Within this tier, there are three sub-classes:

1. Otherwise 'normal' humans suffering from despondence and/or mental impairment, brought about by harsh conditions;
2. Criminals convicted of severe crimes but not sentenced to death, subjected to lobotomies and turned into mindless slaves; and
3. Those who underwent experimental procedures intended to 'augment' them but resulted in their perpetual agony.

Their equivalent to the Imperial Guard (aptly named Imperial Cipher) operates as government bodyguards in peacetime, but it only becomes interesting in wartime, when they are the (I assume) primary intelligence organization (military or civilian) in the Imperial Order.
