Despite the fact the Star State's very existence is justified upon the extermination of all non-human life, nearly one out of every five sapient being in the territory under its nominal control is still non-human, with one out of every fifty a "near-human", though no further information of what these near-humans are could be found.

able to harden in response to physical trauma son, greatly reducing the damage inflicted by brute kinetic force. This allows the energy to be distributed across a large mass of NCAF so that actual loss in nanite functionality from damage is minimized. The stuff's good at dealing with bullets, harsh environments, EMPs, and DEWs, but what it isn't good at dealing with is plasma. This is where its armor comes in, the platey bits that stop the Jerichos from just looking like gray goopy people. The plating is a composite which incorporates Lunar Titanium which is a better hurt-stopper. I know it probably has to go through some fancy fabrication process before it ends up on a drone but it's still gonna be my headcanon that they just slap whatever they've peeled off of a dead spaceship onto a Jericho. Gives em a bit more soul y'know.

As a short one-liner first, I wonder what happened to all the crazy and weird tech stuff with large numbers that would make a computer blush (or run into error, because there are too many numbers). Definitely a retcon at work.

So one of the things I have learned about Synne Industries today - Non-Government Defense. The fact that they have private military companies and security contractors to aid in the defense of their own country. That itself is good enough, and thankfully, I am just glad that Synne Industries only do defensive work and tasks with these people. I don't want to once again play on the trope of how private military companies are unethical - I am sure that if I read more, there are companies and private armies that at least has some resemblance of ethics. So yeah, it's nice to see the mercenaries, at least from what I have read, doing something nice and defensive instead of going all-out offensive.

That, and the Synnian Self-Defense Army is the smallest branch of the Synnian Armed Forces in terms of equipment, mostly relegated to duties on Synnian soil. It would seem like you are relying a little too much on the private contractors for self-defense. If RL Singapore is anything to go by with external help, I would recommend SSDA having more numbers and force.

Perhaps learning that their First Contact with the aliens was less than stellar, and yeah, opening up to more trouble as time goes by. Man, what a gateway that opens to, as if the fight between the humans weren't enough.

And learning about the economy, and I quote: "The commonwealth's private sector and its gargantuan semi-private sectors control entire systems' worth of resources, with Holding Collectives -small conglomerates of varied industries- own all resources in entire star systems, while various number of worlds -and offworld deep space arcologies- have been dedicated to varied sectors of the economy, designated Forge Worlds, Industrial Worlds, Mining Worlds and Agri-Worlds."

I'm just wondering if most of their industries really only do come from these places, being a space empire, or that there are other things that they actually weirdly profit from. Taking a page from Comerciante, I wonder if stationery was still needed in space because hey, there are times when you really could use that pen and paper! I won't be surprised if one day humanity as a whole went galactic and our export is fast food because aliens just can't resist.

Their national language features a truly ridiculous amount of complexity in that it uses vocabulary from damn near every language, and depending on circumstances you will be using a completely different language from one sentence to the next. This raises concerns with scientific legibility, as a lot of scientific terminology relies upon specific prefixes and suffixes that are not necessarily used between languages that are employed to describe different disciplines.

Their name translates to 'Sandstalkers of Heaven', they are a hyper-militaristic yet oddly cordial tribal confederation, and each tribe participates in Wargames that are treated extremely seriously.

What if Eastern Rome survived?

Basic Overview: Basically an althist where Basil II actually has decent successors who build on his achievements, resulting in a STRONK ERE that beats back the Sejuks and eventually does it's own reconquesta in the Middle East. Also, The Crusades never happened, the Viking conquest of Britain succeeded, Genghis Khan died as a young prisoner in a tribal camp, Alexander Nevsky united Russia, and the HRE became a centralized state and destroyed France and the Normans.

I learned that somehow Poland has three aircraft carriers. I additionally learned that this Poland is chad.

What I didn't learn is...

- how Poland is still in the Warsaw Pact despite revolting against the USSR,
- how Poland in this timeline actually implements nazbol given that its understanding of nazbol seems to be "socialism but we wave flags around",
- how Poland in this timeline is governed,
- how Poland managed to rebuild its economy with not one but two hegemonic powers aligned against it to the point where it can afford aircraft carriers,
- Anything about the state of the world outside Europe apart from an incomplete list of nations,
- Or really anything apart from how many guns they have and their territorial bounds.

Instead, the people of Ghes gather into "hosts" at the beckoning of the Caller on the Council (albeit it is presumed by myself that the Caller does so with the Council's approval being the weakest member of the Council Political Influence wise to avoid sudden deaths). These great hosts can be expected to be totally unique often never emulating the hosts before it, as each of the Kiu Ghes more than likely engage in differing levels of trade and technology thanks to how to spread out they are.

The hosts are often formed in response to fulfilling a single strategic objective and once it is done dissolves as quickly as they formed."

The origins of Pulsroth comes from Lani'aka, a small monarchy created by the natives of the islands back in 1294. Lani'aka was prosperous, but still had civil unrest quite frequently. This was because it was ruled harshly by the monarchs. All of this ended when the British arrived in 1772.

The ANs current ruling party holds a platform of meritocracy, free-market capitalism, moderate conservatism and "cultural" nationalism. What the BN doesn't mention is how the aforementioned party even functions with a platform where literally everyone of the positions is incompatible with every other one.

AN: The Wehrmacht has basically overhauled its operations to function around mage warfare, that meaning slapping a "mage" in every aspect of land, aerial and naval warfare they could think of. "Aerial Infantry Mage", "Armored Mage", et al
