The general trend has been higher effort posts, so I welcome the ninjafication.

Had to de-Tengri-fy it somehow. And yeah, if they understood the concept of "the void" and "spacetime", they'd probably identify the Mother with that, but as it is, they're too ""primitive"" to grasp such notions.

Their economy, interestingly enough, is highly based on gemstones, corn, and rice. An unusual combination, to say the least. Their military also has a nuclear branch, which makes it seem like they maybe have a few too many nukes if they need an entire damn branch dedicated to them.

Their territory appears to be divided into 64 regions known as 'Crownzones', which to me sounds either like the name of a band or a reality show focusing on military reenactments.

FFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFFINE...

At one point, there was an interestingly counterintuitive instance where the British and Americans actually worked to supply German Nationalists with supplies and weapons to assist in some form of rebellion against Shtet, though this never really went anywhere as said Nationalists were already heavily infiltrated by Shtet's own spies.

The Caleshan Valkyrie has several hundreds of "land carriers" whose lengths are between 300 to 700 meters with "armaments of a slightly greater efficiency" ...we guess they're not bad jokes like the Maus and Ratte because they need mobile fortresses with commodities and life-support systems in a highly desertified and hostile world.

The concept of AN is a Jewish state in Europe. It's an awesome alternate history concept I haven't seen at all, and would definitely affect European politics, like displayed in their great factbooks.

They're a union between the governments of US and Canada, with each government still retaining a lot of their jurisdictions and powers, but can cooperate with each other.

They appear to be a version of Britain as found in V for Vendetta, with a thoroughly fascist british government that 'removes' any form of religious or ethnic deviancy.

Though, they used the wrong word in their factbook. It is 'Proscription', not 'Prescription', in that specific context.

The Caleshan Valkyrie put the theory of mechanized, walking heavy weapons carriers into practice with mechs called "Direwolves". These mechs can travel incredibly fast, carry a wide variety of payloads, and stand about head height. I imagine they'd likely be used as "patrol boats" or "go-fasts" to compliment the Caleshan "aircraft carrier" land-ships, as opposed to support units for fireteams of soldiers, though, given their speed and mobility that would quickly leave an unaugmented human behind. If these things are mass-producible, though, that's terrifying. Wolf-like hunters able to withstand modern weaponry and proficient in the use of heavy weaponry would be devastatingly effective combatants up close and from afar.
