Well, hate crimes are treated as an aggravating factor rather than a crime in their own right.

For example; Public humiliation or contempt of honor are crimes punishable with 1 to 3 years with the right to parole, however, if this has been motivated by homophobia, racism or sexism and etc. the right to parole is lost and 1 year and a half is added to the total sentence.

The same works with physical aggression or (attempted) murder, each crime has its own penalty and the "hate crime" aggravates the total penalty in the aforementioned way.

Oh you'd definitely face a fine for that. Anyone above or below the age of 16 is not permitted to engage in sexual activities in the DK, and furthermore it's illegal to engage in sexual acts with both minors and minors (the latter known to be rather grubby, let's be honest.)

desk.

It all depends on all the factors involved. Was the intern an adult or a minor? Was the "favor" consensual between the two parties or did one of them oppose it? Was it during working hours or had both of them already closed their shift?

If it is underage but "consensual" it is obviously a crime of pedophilia and the penalty is life imprisonment, if it was forced in any way it is child abuse and the penalty is death.

As the intern is of legal age, we return to the issue of consent, if someone forced the other, it is a crime of rape and the penalty is also death.

If everything was consensual and the intern is of legal age, there remains only the question of the moment of the act. If they were on working hours, both would be fined and the intern could lose his/her internship.

If it's out of office hours for both, nothing would happen. The person would probably apologize and close the door.

It really depends who they (the person arrested) are related to if they are related to a civilian then probably the jailor would probably be stripped of their position and a retributionist might use a vigilantes corpse to shoot the jailor. If they were related to a member of the mafia then the jailor would probably just be outright killed.
