Left-wing Utopia

I am presently listening to Shane, by Liz Phair off the 1994 album Whip-Smart, being played from a Spotify playlist I have made for this country.

I have contextualised the song to be about the outbreak of riots on the West Coast of the United States following the declaration of war against the Republic of China by the People's Republic of China. Specifically, it involves a woman's boyfriend, who as a photographic journalist initially documents the unrest in Chinatown before he is sent to document the war itself as the situation in China deteriorates and the United States involves itself.

The song ends with the line "You gotta have fear in your heart" getting drowned out by broadcast audio, most notably in Mandarin and/or Cantonese.

What if some ancient Filipina got really, really religious about the ocean?

What if there was a sizeable island between Taiwan and Luzon?

What if both of these generated bizarre and frankly random butterfly effects?

All of these and more are revealed on Glengo Island...

CYNIC, n. A blackguard whose faulty vision sees things as they are, not as they ought to be. Hence the custom among the Scythians of plucking out a cynic's eyes to improve his vision.

The Schwanengesang of Heinrich Schütz (1585-1672), in this recording.

More accurately, it's a setting of Psalm 119, but it's also known as Schütz's 'Schwanengesang' (swan song) or 'Opus Ultimum' (last work) since the 86-year-old Schütz self-consciously presented it as his final culminating work.

Schütz is generally considered the greatest German composer before J.S. Bach.
