During Stella's comatose phase, Duncan legally changes his name to Tinder. After her coma, Stella regains a lot of her memory and is now revealed to be Celia from before.

That must have been an unbelievably powerful weapon to almost one-shot Celia.

Tinder decides that his name is absurd, and after running into 5 security mishaps over his name, he changes it back to Duncan.

Duncan receives a threat letter directed at Aila's Team by a person who refers to himself in the letter as Falcon, he then immediately notifies the others.

Duncan changes his name back to man, then finds out that Falcon was his evil twin all along, he then completely forgets about Falcon and goes to sleep.

As it turns out, Starbucks is really Falcon, and he notifies Celia that Duncan is cheating on her. However, Aila's team has footage of the event for some reason (*cough* *cough* the shop is managed by someone on the team), and Celia notices that Falcon's claim is false.

A robot built by Mina Sezlet was hidden in the Dunkin that Falcon is in; the owner activates the robot's combat mode so that it kills Falcon. That still leaves the anti-Celia, Stalle, alive though...

Duncan is now the "Man 1" of the story.

New man.
New anti-man.
