Not packing out trash from a park.

Technically a monarchy, haven't gotten the right issues to be canon yet.

My word comprehension turned off while reading your post but I assume you mean littering in a park?
No government punishment, but the locals will bully you into fixing that mistake.

If you didn't know it was endangered and didn't kill it, nothing. If you knew it was endangered but didn't kill it, a formal warning. If you killed it, even if you didn't eat it, the punishment of a large fine and couple weeks in prison. More if the animal is endangered only due to human activity.

YN's punishment for: accidental animal abuse due to improper feeding, though this was unknown.

Animal Abuse by Negligence. Given a small fine, usually equivalent to 50 USD. Although, that law isn't very enforced.

Life imprisonment; if they escape, they get exiled and become someone else's problem.

Killing a murderer (or someone who's committed a crime on a similar level) gets only five years in jail if it wasn't self-defense (with mandatory therapy), and self-defense gets no punishment.

Depending on the circumstances ranging from reckless endangerment at best and attempted homicide at worst if they're unharmed, homicide if they die, and maybe assault plus first two if they're hurt but alive.

Messing with road signs.

It depends on the damage done and whether it was intentional or not. If you killed the person and wished to do that it is life imprisonment, if you killed them and it was an accident, 20 years in prison, if they did not die and the act was done intentionally, 30 years, if they were injured and you did not want to do it, about 15 years

Doing AAN because AN didn't have a illegal thing.

Importing invasive species (if they do any harm to anything) can lead you 10 years jail and 2k fine.
