"It's a shame, you know? Takes a real talent to take the helm of any nation at such a young age - let alone one like Germany. For better or worse he's a tough little bastard - if only he wasn't completely misguided. Tell me that there isn't some comedy in a 'social libertarian' fighting against the rights of transgender individuals to identify how they please, locking up drug users, or invading defenceless island nations? That's what liberty looks like in the new Germany, yes? At least after he's got done selling the 'people's government' to the highest bidder? No, the libertarians like Mr. Hartmann... They're just right-wing demagogues to scared to admit it. They can say they're concerned with freedom and 'individual rights' all they want. If only they weren't as transparent as a window."

"After giving this a long period of thought, I come to the realization that Wiker is an acceptable leader. While I cannot say that he is who I would have in mind for a leadership position, Wiker proves to have sufficient skill as a leader and his approach is mostly pragmatic. While I still find a few of his stances downright humorous in their absurdity, such as being against abortion, overall I think Wiker is okay. It takes a leader of great skill to do what he has done, and I can respect that. My stance is neutral."

"That's all well and good, but Wiker is not the kind of leader we should be supporting at this time. We need fellow ideologues willing to support our revolution against the Holy Empire's colonial government, that we may rule ourselves under Daemusari religious law. Even if Wiker is a good leader, he has no political reason to support us. We should be cautious about things like this, dear sister."

*"Huh, I remember seeing the Kal, and while he didn't leave the best impression, it also wasn't the worst. Now time for this one... Just like the Kal, he has a lifespan of over 1200 moons (100 years) - I start to think, that it is the average age for those species. It seems, that he is a shapeshifter frowns back - does that mean, that he can shapeshift into something like a dog, or are his capabilities working in a different way? Either way, his powers would leave StarClan to shame, in case if they even existed. He is a deceiver, spymaster, and as poisonous/sly as snake, but on the other side it means, that he has put his qualities for a greater good, and doesn't use them for lowly things like robberies or other crimes. He uses the various tools provided by his clan well - if the Kal is the brain, then he is the muscle. It also seems, that he owns a kitten - I would probably adore that kitten as well if I was a twoleg. But as a Clan cat, it is still hard to appreciate the domesticated cats who don't leave the comfy golden cage of their owners, to discover their hunter's skills. However, he is also good at improvisation - another skill I learned back in the days of BloodClan, sometimes in hard way. I could go on and on, but let's just sum up at this - I am neutral on the Kaz's ideas (politics), but although we have similarities in character, I still wary of him - after all, there is not always enough space for two snakes in the same den."*

"This Pinochet figure is truly abhorrent. Cannibalism? Slavery? Nuking coastlines? The worst part is that they sully the admirable experiment of Patagonia with their blood money. Honestly, I find it hard to believe. Would the army actually do that? Overthrow Allende? His regime was so stable in my timeline, with Chile maintaining a multi-party Marxist state for more than two centuries. The Bolivian nativists remind me of the Maoist 'Shining Path', who had taken over large swathes of Bolivia during the Bolivian civil war.

Honestly, with how ridiculous his regime is, I wonder if this is a joke like that
