"Tch. Bloody nazis, I had hoped we had stamped out that evil for good in the Great Patriotic War. Really, I don't have anything good to say about these two nazi witches. They haven't really changed anything in Germany, and have maintained much of the trappings of the old regime besides 'removing socialism', which I was under the impression was something their predecessors had already done. I can only hope that they and their followers soon perish, and that Germany is freed from their bloody-handed tyranny."

*This song plays in the background***

Le Patron attempts to pull it together ever since he was left by monke. But this time, it was for real. There's no way back now, he is all alone in this world. How to deal with grief, he pondered. Onwards to insanity and falling down the rabbit hole, Le Patron walked down the stairs. A toast to good times with Owakinini and Kotera, he danced on the staircase through the night with little care for the world.

*Attempts to put on a smile while dressed up as a clown***
"I am a very unhappy man. A man without no one in this world, no monke and no cocaine. But you, how could you put a smile in insane times like these? People are gloom and doom these days while your people look so happy... Actually, it's probably just the surveillance and social credit system. If you can't make everybody happy then we ought to make the happy... by force. But is it just me or is the world getting insane out there?"

"Smith is a boring person, but not the bottom-of-the-barrel boring. I'm quite happy to hear that he has some background that isn't political, even if it is just small things. He... doesn't have an impressive military record. Only Lance Corporal? That's a bit underwhelming for the leader of a nation, especially one that I hear gets into frequent shouting contests about military power or something like that. Oh, and his thing about being a band member. It's a funny joke to keep saying that he actually cares more about music than the country. Hehe, I'll never let that dumb joke go. Overall, I don't really have a strong opinion. I'm pretty neutral towards Smith."

In a normal-looking Art Deco-style office, the atmosphere is oddly cold and inhospitable... mentally. The most notorious men of the Secret Service are somehow meeting at the First Lady's office in [REDACTED].

QUOTE

In the usual solemn yet ominous, Prof. Nedelykov is reading Marcus's biography in Braille.

"With due respect, I can see [pun intended] why the Valentiaans are to be reckoned with not only for their size and amiability but also surprising level of intelligence. This man is a respectable scientist and politician in his own right. Still, I would tread lightly around the man. I won't want to bump into a 10-meter tall man, blind or not."

Prof. Dr. Konstantin Stepanovich Nedelykov

Surveillance Level: A1 – former fascist collaborator, under care of Secret Service

Hiding in the dark corner of the room, Dr. Pashkov's eyes are glowing in strange yellow-red light like snake eyes.

"There are two kinds of drugs in this world if you are willing to put morality as a factor of judgement -- curing or killing. Blessed be his soul, he has chosen the path of the noble and the virtuous, while I am forever spinning spells of death in the giant spinning wheel that put Vasilisa [Zitravian name for Sleeping Beauty] to a century of death-like slumber. Still, though, I am particularly interested of his research on the alien lifeforms. They don't put actual lives in my hands anymore..."

Dr. Sergey Petrovich Pashkov

Director of Secret Service's Medical Department (SSMD)

Reading reports after reports, both official and personal, the First Lady has this certain right to speak on her husband's behalf -- not as his wife but rather as the Secret Service's [REDACTED].

"Is that Sylvia or Julia? Ah, it's Sylvia, the more outgoing one, I believe? Could really agree (more) with Smith being a complete bore. While I do not insist on being an Auestriker [Pan-Germanic people], I suppose that I can still draw some cultural parallel between myself and the twins. The circumstances of their childhood and military careers are of the strangest I have ever heard... yet. And despite their ardent hatred of opposing ideology (read: communism), they appear to be nicer or even more childish than I expected. Weird to say this, but they are lovely people for the world that created them. I wish, too, that I could be more in touch with my childish side."

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitravgrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

Who are you, a 1800's Tory? I think her attitude of "some are born better than others" is true, though governments should make it so that everyone has equality of opportunity, not equality of outcome. However, I must say I agree with her on many things, such as her views on gay marriage and reproductive rights. I do sympathize with her tragic past and her constant surveillance, and she's rather relatable, at least in my opinion. I mean, death isn't that scary. "I have to say Ms. Sera is an interesting individual it would seem me and her share the same concerns for our people. Lets take a look at what she believes in, I agree with her economical stance on having free education and free health in fact I am currently trying to get those two to pass in Parliament one day soon hopefully. However, I have to disagree her views on democracy, while I know some politicians are corrupted within some democratic systems who never keep their promise. I still believe democracy is the only way for any nation's future, democracy gives citizens to voice their concerns to their government and help change their nation for the better. I'm glad that Ms. Sera respects other democratic nations and is willing to work with them As of right now my opinion is mostly neutral on her."-Prime Minister Amelia Larson

"Miss Amelia reminds me of the hopeful ideals I had as I settled the expedition. A desire to heal the sick, done free of charge in the League out of both necessity and decency. To provide shelter and work for all able. To try and educate the youth about what will be necessary in the future. Her isolation is something I could never entertain. We are alone out here, and the only way for us to grow is to reclaim what scattered settlements remain to keep us all alive. She is an idealist. The world has harsh spite for idealists. If the winter ever comes for her, she'll be buried in the snow if she doesn't adapt."

"Ooooooh! He seems fun, people say he's too excessive or whatever but if anything he doesn't go far enough! They have that massive heat engine right? Why not throw the dissents inside of it? Or maybe make them eat coal until they die of black lung? I have more ideas to improve your methods, but overall I think that Treadway would be a good person to share some of my...interests to. But aside from that my opinion is positive."

"Negative definitely, we are at war. I don't give a shit about how strong is his robotic army! He attacks Skyhooked, so together with my people I will fight him and his goons no matter their numbers or strength. And forged by the fires of the revolution, Skyhooked shall survive the war, and arise in it's new glory. Determined to kill us all, this tyrant left us no choice but to defend the Earth and eventually tear those machines down! This might be our last stand, and so, we shall give no quarter! Oh, and... I wanna hand Paramount's head on the wall." -Shawn Bjornson

Skyhooked is MT/PMT with a few FT elements. Military is factbook only. NS stats are mostly non canon.

Yes our leader has a long title. No, that is not a self-appointed title, nor by choice. It is of political significance; excluding even one part of the title could lead to revolts.
