You seem to have great quality of life and the concept of a Japanese nation is interesting, but..."public floggings, frequent executions" brings me down.
Edit: Dumbass me, still, no. Conscription, capital punishment, and corporal punishment make it worse.
BN: Provide an explanation, you don't have to go into detail though and a one-liner would be fine.

Yes. While it does seem to have problems, mainly a moderately high level of corruption, I think it'd be a great place to live given its friendly people and high standard of living.

I don't see any reason not. It seems like a nice place. The only thing going against my decision is the climate of the region. A little too warm for my liking but it's nothing I can't handle.

Yes, seems like a great place to live. Plus the Drongonian government would probably give me refugee status if I applied for it since I guess I technically qualify, that has to come with some benefits.
