Whatever that means, not a crime.

Killing a slaver (in Kyria, slavers and those who felicitate slavery are not protected by human rights laws as they forfeit them by rejecting the human rights of those they enslave - thus they're outlaws and so killing them is not prosecutable).

As a general rule, vigilante justice is frowned upon, so unless it's in self-defense, it'd be murder or manslaughter. In both cases, the court is almost definitely going to let the man go with little more than a slap on the wrist though. Probably a few weeks of community service and therapy.

Cremated on the burning pyre that used to be your vehicle. A coup de grace may or may not be present after being pitched into the flames.

Running a casino island in YN waters but claiming it as sovereign territory. Refusing to pay taxes, enforce laws, etc.

Proclaiming a religion in Frisemark isn't illegal, due to civil rights legislation and the fact that for your religion to exist in an official and registered capacity, there is a lot of paperwork. So, really, no punishment.

Anyone who funds a group that wants to overthrow the government will be punished for treason. However, the punishment will be weak compared to running the group directly.

Fake local public institutions by forging official documents of higher public institutions.

You will have to pay any damages that are caused as a result of the fire, as well as a fine of 1000 Karazi credits, or you may even have to spend 1-3 years incarcerated, although more years can be added if there is any severe injuries or death caused.

Blowing up an office building and then fleeing your nation by swimming all the way to Puerto Rico, or if your nation has Puerto Rico as part of your territory, swimming to the Dominican Republic.

Some problems with that,

1. There are very few explosives in Insulamia and it is incredibly hard to make one yourself
2. Even if you manage to DIY a bomb, it probably won't be that big
3. There aren't as many office buildings here relative to other Western countries
4. The ones that do exist are quite small and quite sturdy
5. There is no good reason to do it and almost no Insulamian wouldn't do it
6. Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic are really far away

If you manage this, though, then the damage will likely be minimal and you will probably drown upon swimming 500m from the Insulamian coast. So you can't be charged.
