"If it isn't the dear biomass Alastair, the sinful drunkard. I warned the useless, quavering thing that alcohol would be the death of him, that only prohibition would do. And here he is, a lamentable, deplorable, stuttering mess, requiring severe hospitalization, and unable to string together a full sentence without breaking down. This is what happens to those who do not listen to the divine guidance of the Omnimyth, who stray from the Way and embrace the Antiway. The only mercy that can be provided now is a swift death. What he has become is a complete embarrassment to his nation and the entire system of governance. I do believe an invasion is in order, to save the souls of the poor Western Fardelshufflestein people. There is no time like the present, after all."

--- UPDATED OPINION ---

"So now that the Ecclesiarch has given her thoughts on me, i can safely say that we can start building on some form of positive relationship from there. that being said, her mentioning of my horns seems to have raised my curiosity, making me wonder if there is some sort of a personal interest in me as well... *chuckles*... but i digress. It is nice to see that she is willing to forgo the more militaristic methods and work on a more civil approach, which i will be much more willing to listen and cooperate if the agreements are as fair as she says they will be. I eagerly await to see what she has to offer that will benefit us both greatly in the long run. From here, she has my positive interest, and i hope that it will only get better in time... perhaps even on a personal level, as well."

"I'm not particularly fond of Sera's interests in socialism and communism, but apart from that, there are many things one might learn about leadership from her. Her willingness to establish equality and peace in Platinia, and ensure that her people prosper are the right qualities of an efficient leader. Her passion for pacifism despite her country's strength is rather astounding ; power has, at least not yet, corrupted her."

"I... dont know where to start with this one. it is very disheartening to see how one can be so care-free with all the suffering the goes on outside around his little zone of comfort with his fellow mercenaries. I will get straight to the point, though, The worst thing about him is his "hunting". taking away the lives of animals just for sport is disgusting and is one of the crimes that carries the death penalty here if caught... But surely, what could possibly have been done in one's early life for someone to become like this? i am struggling to find any valid reason for any of it. still, what i feel for him is not hatred, he would have to do something directly against me for that. What I feel for him is pity. he is capable of much, but what he uses his capabilities for is wrong. i just wonder what it would take for him to snap out of his current way of thinking before life finally catches up with him... Could I work with him? im not sure. it is hard to look away at what he does, but it is mostly dependent on his views on me. i try to get along with everyone, after all, which is already an extremely difficult task as it is with how people think these days..."

WORD of The President

"I find it mildly amusing actually. There are a lot of thing about Empress Sera I do not like, notably that title, however the standards by which one should be judged do... change slightly when faced with the context of being a cosmic being that can see life in a hundred contexts. In that context I wish all power in the universe to her ability to serve the people and safeguard the rights of the working people in her domains.

Howver, I have my issues with her. She outright opposes democracy as a system of governance built on the understanding that politicians are dishonest and con-artists. I would challenge that notion. Politicians are subject to the movements, political, and economic forces that prop them. I have always said that the true reflection of what a politician will do is not to look into their program but who is supporting them. I am supported by the unions, socialists, communists, as well as the most radical democratic forces in the country and my party operates as a daily force in the people's livelihood. For a true democracy the mass movements need to be strong so they can pressure politicians to follow through. And that is why I signed the amendment granting the Alliance of Trade Unions National Congress the right to appoint representatives to the Assembly.

I'm perfectly open with working with her on her as equal partners and as equal nations. She is a good leader and person above everything else but she isn't necessarily flawless."

Signed, President of the Federation, Secretary-General of the People's Party,
Inteins Arek

Anyway, looking at it... pretty fancy stuff you have there, I must say! I am looking through about yourself and I must say, you are quite a person for someone who is new here. Oh, I meant that as a compliment. We don't usually get a lot of good people around here these days. Or at least ones that has a decent amount of information attached to them. Perhaps they are lost to time, and you are one of the replacements. Anyway, enough about that. You seem to be in-line with what I, and the rest of the Valentians, think about when we say that we want to build a world to ourselves. The ideologies, and the policies that you have made and carried out, were more or less the same as ours. Now that is something that we can look forward to! As for democracy though, that is unfortunately something that we fall short but we still applaud you for. See the thing is... most of us are going to live beyond multiple universes, and perhaps even forever. So, the term "Dictator for life" applies to us, but we are more benevolent, if you are to believe our words. Still, yes, Democracy is a cornerstone for many, many of us, and even though I will oppose the idea of someone running against me, I do say that it's good for everything else. Now, I am going to put you back gently. Please don't struggle or panic. Last guy did that and he ended up splattered onto the ground. It really is not a beautiful sight for me. I hope to see you around!

"quite strange how John came into power. it was by no means a legitimate way, but he was smart about how he acquired it. i would consider him more of a dictator despite him being called president, but that doesnt really matter to me, so long as he is treating his population well, that is what matters most. it is nice to see that he is a fellow socialist, thought the difference between us is that he seems to have a knack for making a mess of outside capitalist influences. normally i dont approve of meddling with foreign relations. but from what i have seen, it is justified, considering the greed for oil has been widely abused on earth enough as it is and they seriously need to start looking for better alternatives... There is one glaring concern however, which is this something related to nuclear weapons... if this is true, i hope for his sake he is no longer considering such a thing, there are extremely dire consequences in the use of such weapons, not just for him, but for everyone. Overall, i will keep neutral views for now."

Oh wait, she controls MULTIPLE universes? Well, lets just hope that Delta can still work, because if not we just screwed up for no good reason. That being said, in all honesty she seems nice, but that last gal seemed nice before she turned out to be the leader of what can only be described as 'Socialist Macronesia according to the World Assembly.' And she thinks that the use of nukes is bad, which, a very good moral path to take, is probably not the one we are ready for yet. We still haven't figured out a way to properly dispose of Project Delta, much less take steps to do so. Anyway, we'll just remain neutral for now, but if she or her allies tries to take us down, I can guarantee you they won't know what hit them.

"She had acted irrationally while she was defending the political-economic principles of socialism and communism as though they were not implemented properly. Speaking of these radical principles I can only surmise Sera saw what those principles were supposed to be—the same principles my mother and father were murdered for—and thought she shall be the one to exact on those principles. Her idealist affections for socialism and communism should have been laughed off as nothing more than just her idealism, hearing her speak in defence of these murderous, radical principles really just shows her beliefs are rather faulty and not straightforward."

"At first sight, a wolf as a monarch sounds like a joke, but once I came to know more about his life, I grew interested. I admire him for the fact that after the bloodshed he caused, he expressed remorse and repentance, and went on to commit further acts of kindness in his kingdom."

Now taking a break at the weapon testing site, the Chefforscher sits down with a newspaper and a cigarette, not minding his subordinates trying out new machine guns behind him.

"Fucking bite me. Tunisia surrendered within what? Two weeks? It's either god is on his side or he is actually something. Ah yes, "god" comes in the form of his allies. How quickly he has changed his face from some kind of progressive liberator to conquerer of ancestral legacy..."

"Finally, someone who is not boring, huh? Warmongers, imperialists -- those are names we give conquerors who are too successful. Well, he can do anything he wants and fights for any future he wants to see. The more wars, the better* -- human evolutionary history grows from warfare and innovation that it brings."

I mean, I can definitely shrink myself, but this is my usual height at 109.72 meters! I get to stand beside my Vallie like that, hm hm! Ahh, anyway, enough about myself! Mr. Ennio has been a very, very wonderful friend for me and the Valentians, along with the rest of Stanier as always! I wonder where Mr. Sing is! I do hope that he's fine, along with... Kako, right? I think that's her name! Hmm, they said robots can't forget! Maybe I do! Yes, I am positive on Mr. Ennio! I think you are a little bombastic and loud, but overall, under those eyes, I know that you are very, very well-meaning, and people really love you for that! I also like that you have starred in quite a lot of productions and shows! We got to have some hobbies too even as leaders, and I am glad you found yours!

I mean, you seem to be doing fine by yourself as of now, but I am worried for your health, and for all the good reasons! Looking and reading at your report here, "He is also rather unhealthy, sensitive to heat and sunlight due to his conditions and suffers occasional bouts of headache for no apparent reason. His sight has improved after surgeries but he still has a pair of glasses he uses while working." Hmm, perhaps you would like to come with us and see if Germaine or the others can help you out? Don't worry, we Valentians will make sure that you are good as new, and there will be no such thing as sickness! I mean, of course we don't force treatments on those who doesn't want it, or force eugenics and making perfect DNA that stuff is dangerous! >< We are simply trying our best to each someone's suffering. "Clarissa is the most emotional droid that I've seen. I bet if I open her up I'd see a human heart.
But that's silly I'd never hurt a friend, unless it meant the wellbeing of my people, then I'd take their soul and follow their last wish to the grave... or just kill them.

But enough about my past. Everyone in Lowblood looks up to those of Valentine Z. During Low's rule, the giants and the populus grew to respect one another. And during Oni's harmonious rule they even took into consideration to make our structures giant friendly. Because I believe you broke a roof due to some teleporting shenanigans

Now it's a shame our giants are reaching extinction, but they look to you and valjentine as beacons of hope. And now that they are not in such hostile environments they can rebuild their population. Maybe the next ruler would be as tall as you, Clarissa.

I look to you and the others of your nation with the fire that resides in my heart, something warm."- The first king

I struggle to find the right words for this... er, him.

In many ways he is like us. He was wronged, and sought to right that wrong. Don't get me wrong - he's a maniac. But I understand his motives and admire tenacity and dedication. The Rapture Republic is a bit of a joke, I reckon. He fought them, and although he fought them especially brutally, all is fair in love and war. Here, it's both; love for his people, war against Rapture.

He sought to right the wrongs against his people, against himself, and against his home.

His story is one of vengeance, triumph, and erasure. He's a perfect example of why we fight: even if we lose, or don't achieve the program's goals, we still win with jouissance and our will to power.

I wish him well.

"I understand the core tenets of his philosophy, and all, but I feel he might need a bit more time in the oven, so-to-speak. Not that I am at all against him attempting to spread his intellectual wings, but potentially he might be a bit more modest about it, a bit less edgy. If he doesn't respect the position of a monarch, so be it, but he may wish to at least temper his philosophy a slight bit, play the Overton window game."

WORD of The President

"Any patriotic Ankrasian opposes monarchy however this is yet another case where I would have to make an exception given King Random operates in a time where monarchies are normal. In his context, he is a progressive defender of the people. By all accounts, his people and leadership are a lot more socially progressive than much of humanity was in the same period in our history so I can't fault him for being a product of his time. He sponsors education, medicine, and the liberal arts like philosophy. In combination with that, he has adopted liberal stances in regards to the rights of homosexual people and people facing similar suppression. Absolutely progressive in his context.

However, I will reserve my complete and thorough judgment until he truly makes amends with the regional tribes. Whether he truly feels remorse for that bloodbath regarding the Vix can only be determined by results, not tears. However, so far, he has seemed to follow through so perhaps I am too harsh.

Signed, President of the Federation, Secretary-General of the People's Party, Inteins Arek
