During the 50's, a Communist sympathizer was lynched near the city park.

this split. The city between the Marxists, Voltairians, and the Monroeians. The Marxists wanted to find and kill the guys who killed the man, and they were soviet sympathizers themselves. They were very radical in their beliefs of communism. The Voltairians were Laissez-faire capitalists, meaning they did not want the government to interfere in the economy. They were the ones who killed the guy. The Monroeians are interfere capitalists, meaning the government should set regulations and have health inspections regularly. They were the first to find out about the murder.

They eventually found out that a Voltairian did it, and he was sent to prison for life. In the 70's though the 80's, an upstart group of Marxists formed their own group, the Maoists, in wake to the Chinese Civil War against them North Communists, and the Southern Nationalists.
