"I think I've seen you before, now I know the boomers can be a bit annoying but that doesn't justify anything. But who am I to lecture you about morality, my nation has done arguably worse things than your passive genocide. Also the world that you're in seems to be much bleaker than my world, 15 to 16 billion humans? I thought we will peak at 10. However, there are several things we can agree on mainly the universal basic income. We don't have problems with automation here in Sherechia but we implemented it... just in case. Another thing I agree on is replacing student debt with that shared payment agreement thing. It just sounds smart while giving the finger to those big banks. You're really subtle with your actions unlike us who literally set bankers on fire but there's nothing wrong with being subtle. A lot of the concepts you mention are also really complicated and you seem to write a bunch of papers. I respect that though I won't read any of it since well... I hate walls of text. Morally speaking you're not the best but it could be worse and I can understand why you have to do such things."

Ah, now that was an interesting read... Now, what should I say about you... To begin with, I envy that the nation you rule is in such a good condition! You've really made a good work with it, and while I oppose the ideas of democracy and free market for Laka Strolistandiler, I neither the less can't help but laud the way you've implemented them in your nation. It also warms my heart that both of us, while being eugenists, still give a chance to those born with disabilities. Over all, I'd give everything to one day become a leader just like you. Best wishes to you and your people, Mr Pasca! Ninja'd. Already gave opinion on AL so /skipme.

"Awesomized job snatchin' the revolution outta Mao-Lenin gang, partner! Libertarian left if best left! I like the idea of a place with guns, secularism and freedom! And of course true Hundred flowers, where freedom of speech is practiced and not only declared, so dissenters could be caught more easily. I don't know about driving license abolition, maybe so, corruption is high enough, and even if ya' take one outta hands of someone, who royally screws up and violates lots of rules, he might still ride a car, but without license. Still, driver licenses have some basis, so... Maybe I should gather the Council and debate the importance of driver licenses? If license-less driving works for his country then it might have some merit to consider. But damn... these tortures for those guilty of corruption schemes, are they really necessary? There are other ways to punish these folks without such inhumane practices. I also wodner, what sort of tortures he uses?

By the way, since he claims, that his mountain paradise is protected from imperialsits not only by the people, but also altitude, I think, we should arrange and stage joint military exercises in such conditions, to test our warriors and make them stronger. Our warriors are hardy and not afraid of height, but still, being hardy and adapted is better, while his military will see if this advantage would work for them in case of real attack. If he agrees, I will ride with the warbands to train and practice." -Shawn Bjomson

Also taking note of some of your controversies I gotta say that I look forward to some elaborations on them cause I'm not gonna lie chief they aren't looking good some circles will just read the title and the worst be assumed, but otherwise I can't quite see anything really worth commenting on without some more information. ("Ahent") No, I am sorry. If I was to attempt that, I would be wrong to no end, better you don't hear it for you may end up either laughing, or being royally offended indeed! Speaking of Royalty, I cannot help but notice that you refer to yourself as a so-called 'Asrau'... Why? Is calling yourself a King, or by all means even your previous royal title as Crown Prince too... Normal for you? Even the Zora call their leader a Prince, and they look. Well, very different indeed from your normal Human! As the light is my witness, I would say even the Goron look more similar to us than the Zora, well at least the normal Adults I have encountered.

But enough about that...

I am not sure why you shun your military career too much, your excellency Arslan. I understand you regret what you and your people did at that so called town known as 'Mosul', claiming a slaughter of just under 50 civilians and the such, and yes that is quite horrible indeed. But, take victory in the fact you captured and/or reclaimed the settlement from the hands of... You called your enemies 'Iranians', correct? Take solace in the fact that despite the unintentional slaughter, you had liberated a town that would have had a worse fate under 'Iranian' control, fighting a more corrupt and evil enemy must've been the reason of why you were in conflict to begin with, and that with that the battles, and thus the casualties had stopped earlier.

Despite that, your dedication to the demolishing of corruption is only ever great! The policies of which you had established only benefit your people, and overall you only seem like a honourable man. Continue your good work, don't allow this 'Mosul' to haunt you. Until we meet again, honourable highness."

I'm doing Hyrule, because this is not the thread a man deserves to be done dirty on.

In these many worlds, one sad thing to see is the corruption of courage for the sake of bending to the evil forces of the ruling classes. This llu is one of such examples, and one of remarkable skill despite. A man who fought against enemies despite a cowardly surrender, a man who reformed his compatriots into a true workforce, and a man who rules with skill and ability rather than inane bloodlines and idiotic 'destinies'. And yet, he is also a man who has been too blinded by the comfort of stability to push his hand far enough. He leaves a monarch and her insolent guard servant in power. He allows their 'godsent' power to remain at the top, despite the danger they give to the working class. It is sadly a common trope the other races of this place has fallen into, to believe in kings during the age of stone and iron. We hope one day this great soldier may see that this form of government is not a necessity.

We suppose there is also the chance that this noble soldier is not so noble, however. It could be that we give him the benefit of the doubt, and perhaps his tranquility with his ruling class is out of a hope for self gain, rather than one of true defense. A shift from the rallying grip of the working class to the iron clad fist of self gain and despotism. Is this true, oh pointy eared soldier? Does your sword cut from the pocket of the soldiers below you instead of the monsters at your gate? Do you seek to live in a castle much like your gold covered monarch, rather than helping the soldiers around you serve their country? We suppose there is a chance, but we hope that this opportunity and path is not the one for Ilu.

You have a chance, a chance to make your world better for a long time. We must beg that you take it, as captain of the guard, rather than a growing noble in a jewel encrusted kingdom. Fight, dear soldier, for the right of your people to flourish, rather than for the right to hold up a god and a queen. Your sword has cut down your enemies before, now cut down the one that stands at your house's throne. There is only the love of your people to gain, so long as you can show them the evil of your queen.

The Empire is above such things, there are only results and victory, and there is nothing else. No petty morality, no ethical enslavement, and no clowns telling us, why we should follow B instead of A. None at all. Just the Emperor at the top, and ordering us to use whatever means necessary to accomplish his Grand Vision of an Eternal Golden Dawn for the Alkdorian People, and that is how it should be. Always. Overall, Bjomson is a non-threat to the Emperor, and his civilization is far too primitive, underdevelop, and comedic to told otherwise, in summary, neutral, very much."*

Do Alexios.

Oxton Arielle Lindall Leslie Vitesse Allison: Mercer is a name that is as common to them as the name Clarissa or Samantha are to us. Not that it is necessarily a bad thing, of course, because hey, it does not take a Fate to see the patterns. Fascinating, a man armed with many weapons and abilities just like us, but with the lack of precise numbers and details. "Strong military fortifications" could mean anywhere from an actual supergalactic superfortress, down to a pillow fort that I built out of boredom 300 years ago. Hmm, I am not doubting the abilities, still. If he can fight it, then he can, I am not the one to judge too much. Other than that, I am not that positive towards him at all, on the account that he is a little off his rockers with the way he conducts his boot camp, the general edge, among many other things.

Anyway, I have seen and heard about you before, even if this is the very first time we have encountered head-on, I will admit. I mean, I have been to that universe, I have seen it. It's all too familiar and similar. You are quite indistinguishable from 4.385 quadrillion instances.

Mami's Status: Enjoying some tea

"I have heard so many stories about the people from this universe, and even I doubted if these stories were true and these characters actually real people. Now I know. And quite the adventurous sort she is, the Chief Aviator. Travelling through time and the fabrics between realities. Also a lovely sort too I hear. If she is inclined to we can both sit down and enjoy a talk over tea some time. I might enjoy hearing her stories which will no doubt fascinate me. Cheers to her and the many adventures she will embark on from today."

"This 'Mami Tomoe' creature is peculiar, even among Ersetim*... It says it stopped aging at 16 but it looks like it stopped aging at five, max, and stands with a position of primacy over other 'Magical Girls' which I can only assume also look like small children. Anyway, in regards to less shallow matters, I respect piety but age has clearly curdled this creature's mind and left it insane, crushing it's own people under the totalitarian boot and thinking nothing of spilling the blood of it's kin. Maybe it's kind should overthrow it, or maybe they deserve it's tyranny. I have no idea as I'm not one of them, thank the Gods. Speaking of Gods, she's fanatically opposed to the one known as the 'Goddess of Love', whereas I am devoted to the God of Love-and-War. What a weird coincidence..."
