Under the Food Rights Act 1997, you trespassed (100,000 Poloniums) to scare customers and damage the credibility of the Restaurant (Intentional Damage to Credibility of a Company through illegal ways, 75% Wage Deduction and pay the owner 2M Poloniums in compensation)

Using Counterfeit Items in your Business.

Ninja'd

Where to begin? Let's break all the laws down and add them together:

Kidnapping of Elderly/Person of Vulnerability: 98% Wage Deduction and 100,000 Polonium Fine

Physical Abuse: 20,000 Poloniums

Assault: 98% of Wage deduction and a 100,000 Polonium Fine

Unlicensed Creation of Tattoos: 10,000 Poloniums, 25% Wage Deduction

Unauthorized Creation of Tattoos: 5,000 Polonium Fine

Human Grafitti: 45,000 Polonium Compensation per person.

So, that is 98% wage deduction (Can't go any higher legally, so the time will be extended), 235,000 Polonium Fine and 45,000 compensation to each person. A lot of money not guilty at trial or skip all that mess by paying a reasonable bribe.

If you intentionally used the counterfeit items you can pay a lot of money to your victims, perform labor to pay off your debts, or pay a large bribe to have it all just go away.

That is a Civil Law, not criminal. It would be up to the Company to sue the pirate. A funny one was "Wacman" and "Tesrit"

You are a judge and use a different nation's law system instead of your own

Not a crime; I'm fairly sure that the night watchmen already do that between patrols anyway.

Using non-toxic violet food dye to colour the BN's water supply, thereby dying their population violet as they take their morning showers, as part of a political protest against immigration.

I just really wanted to answer so...

Public discolor. Max 10 years jail.

Protest against immigration. Max 40 years in jail, as the Constitution (will write in the future) said, "Shall the nation be welcome to any tourist."

Animal abuse?

Not a crime - but you may/may not be subject to disciplinary action by said employer, depending on whether you are actually one of their employees.

then it's possible they may be sent to rehab or prison.

Since the Eternal Imperium of All-Existence believes that it is you would be lauded as a patriot

You will be the last one to eat when the next food supply comes in. Also you have to pay for the lost food and pay everybody for their suffering. If anybody dies, you die too.
