"one cannot detect a submarine before it shoots" + implication that surface vessels are obsolete

aaaand there's the hot take. This thread's for pointing out NS cliches, not actually acting them out. Now stop derailing the thread.

Another NS Cliche I'm surprised I don't see more of: Non-Planet Habitation
Whenever I see a stellar civilization, all of their resources seem to be entirely planet-locked with the odd star-ship-civilization

I just kinda wonder why Asteroids, Orbital Stations and more esoteric habitation like gas giants are kinda left out in comparison,

Honestly, with HfOS, I've kinda wanted to go into detail about small-scale settlements on, say, Mars, Asteroids, or otherwise. Unfortunately, I have not been able to, so I think I am just going to have to make a factbook about 'non-terrestrial' settlements (which will include mars, which is a terrestrial planet, but shhhhhh)

That's a trope with virulent anti-Communists on this site who will neglect a socialist nation's lore in favour of making every assumption of it on their preconception of ideological aesthetic; this is usually taken from a perspective that is blatantly just an imposition of their personal sentiments. It's frankly ridiculous and has led to a pretty toxic RP climate. There are also the borderline meme-y communist nations which have clearly been constructed with a poor understanding of Communism (with even the internal rationale and rhetoric being at odds with what occurred in actual communist states) and serve as a "People's Republic of Tyranny" strawman.

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.

Also a complete submarine-based fleet for a minor country would be incredibly based... unlike the one where it tries to buy a tanker and fit three thousand Mk 41's to in order to invade somebody 6000 miles away with its nonexistent army.

Inherently false. Submarines can be detected before firing and have been many times. Additionally, surface fleets often are accompanied by their own submarines for the exact purpose of defending against hostile submarines, they're constantly looking for other subs.

Submarines are also dogshit at anything other than anti-ship and anti-ground, they don't have the radar for anti-air, they can't really transport any cargo or troops, and quite frankly they can be incredibly slow, especially if they're trying to hide. Relying on submarines to do everything is a fool's errand.

Additionally there is technology being developed (satellite or ship-based LIDAR that can work underwater) that may make submarines obsolete, or at least easy to detect if they're anywhere near the surface. Sonar and other forms of detection are only getting better, and if submarines are detected they have little in terms of defense and even a single hit can send them to the bottom with all hands.

Submarines are important, but don't overestimate them.

I appear to have missed a naval spat.

Littoral Combat Ships. I would expect to see someone use something in the same vein as a LCS, given that people use battleships on here, but now that I think about it, I haven't seen any of that. Maybe I don't maintain a sense of permanent naval knowledge, but I just haven't seen those fuckers. Both were types of ships that navies worldwide sunk unbelievable amounts of cash(LCS were from my understanding just a failure in the US Navy, not worldwide), both weren't the best kinds, and both were big as fuck. So, using that criteria you'd expect an LCS to be used more frequently. You'd expect armchair navy enthusiasts on this site to have a collective violent orgasm at the sheer thought of using both failures in their navies against other people doing so in roleplay.

Look, I don't understand how a navy works. I put no emphasis on military apart from when it is necessary for crafting a story. So, I apologize for any lack of knowledge in that area that was blatantly obvious in this post. However, I would like to point out something that you would expect would be a cliché on this site, but it just isn't.

Maybe the LCS program was just that fucking bad.
