Anarchy is like pudding. Delicious, when correctly prepared.

"There is not much on their leaders, but from what I can tell they are somewhat leftist and learning towards a small government. One wonders if their leader is competent, but at least he and the rest of the ruling council do not seem to be the completely evil type. That is certainly a relief to hear, given the last two times I have been dismissed by foreign leaders simply for daring to be a Marxist-Leninist...."

"Anyways, back on my commentary. The state-if one can call it a state-seems to have improved the living of the people, or at least they have received more civil rights. We do wish they were a leftist-style of anarchy though, not the centrist-type they are now. But that is perhaps not only the First Leader's problem to solve."

Statement of the Supreme Acolyte about Karachi

"I... What a pitiful leader! He/She is a coward, favouring limited interaction with other civilizations and colonies, no government and a "benevolent leadership". Without ambition, wanting only to survive, like a mindless beast! How come he hasn't been replaced yet by anyone more competent? This is a travesty and an insult to natural selection! However her/his species seem to be quite unique, being in fact a super-organism made up of many different species. Cosmic Unity Church - Supreme Acolyte Uk'Ondra

- UPDATED OPINION -

"i guess the Supreme Acolyte would be right about his memory not being as good as it was, because i certainly did not have a negative opinion on him. yes, he is power hungry as i previously said, but that can be a good or bad thing depending on the circumstance. he is clever, which one would think would be considered positive. xenophobia, i am totally understanding that there are those out there that only trust their own kind due to reasons of history, so again, nothing negative there. my only slightly disapproving opinion was ruling people through fear, since my own personal methods of doing the opposite have led to a very productive and happy populace... as for the comment on my powers, yes, i am fully aware that i could be using it a lot more productively, but for my people? hardly. the population is small and requires very little attention. i put most of my effort into my personal projects, some of which i keep to myself. however, since he feels that i am wasting my powers, then he should take a better approach and tell me what he thinks i should be using it for, rather than his unnecessary spatting about me being a fool for it. i am open for logical discussions with other leaders, after all... my opinion on the Supreme Acolyte still remains neutral, but lets hope he remembers that this time..."

"It must be difficult to be a 21st century monarch. Everyone wants to know about your life so they can either stalk you or criticize your every move. If you slack off, you are a waste of the people's taxes. If you are too good, you are fake and using your birth privileges. As a woman, you only have it worse. Tabloids only care about the latest man you are seen with and what you wear for your Sunday afternoon tea last summer. But here is my point: the Queen is struggling to make a name for herself and to be the perfect fairytale monarch. It is getting cliché, almost annoying. But I respect that she, like her carbon copies in Britain, Sweden, Portugal, and Russia, are evading the modern guillotine with heartfelt efforts, and doing something useful instead of resorting to hard-line propaganda. Here, I am willing to respect Queen Ilse as a person succeeding age-old family tradition, but do not expect me to be dazzled by her liberal progressive politics or a couple years of military service."

"Is this another one of these anarchists again? He always whines about tyranny and wants to liberate all the 'statists'. So degenerate. His genetics may be of some desirability but that will not make up for his complete lawlessness and a lack of traditional respect. He must be shipped off to an extermination camp once our army locates and captures his goons. He cannot continue his chaos for much longer, he must die a painful death at the hands of the people he hates. In fact, the ditch we will bury his terrorist kind alive in is already being dug up by the concentration camp inmates who he will likely say are 'oppressed by statists' or something along the line. We bury anarchists so it won't be an issue to bury this one if we can get our hands on him. Anarchists are a dish best served nonexistent."

"Biological assessment: Kal'Shazzar possesses swift cerebral processes. His intelligence quotient is considerable. His consciousness is an anomalous amalgam. His flesh appears soft but is not. Illusionist. His manifestation is fluid. His nature is undetermined. We will understand.

Technological assessment: Kal'Shazzar's hedonism-inducing armament is disconcerting. The weaponisation of desirable responses remains impossibly unreliable for the Concordat.

Ideological assessment: Kal'Shazzar's outlined ideological directives are only mildly objectionable. He understands the value of self-improvement and the dangers of complacency. His stance on eugenic optimisation is unknown. He recognises the wisdom of trusting in the manifest and not the abstract, and he does not oppose the necessity of military supremacy. His objection to weapons of desolation is, however, an anomaly. The technological discrepancy may explain this. Theoretical weapons may be not endured even by the supreme genome, resulting in permanent extinction. An unacceptable outcome.

Final assessment: Satisfactory."

I also believe genetics should not play such a powerful part in his worldview, as experience has shown machines are often superior to organic beings in most regards, thus technological development can typically fill in for a living being's weaknesses. Indeed, castration looks to be barbarous by most moral standards. It also seems inefficient: the benefits of a larger sapient population should outweigh the terribly slow evolution brought on by eugenics."

...
A thousand years watching.
What destiny sings.
What destiny rings.
Circle unending.

...
A thousand years dreaming.
Of the promised spring.
Happiness it brings,
Will it be worth waiting?

Does she watch her one thousandth spring flowers as hopefully as she watched her first?"

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitragrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. | My NS-Related Art | Hehe bad meme as flag
