Countries that have slavery in the modern day are dumb. Because slave owners discovered it was more profitable to actually pay their workers.

Imagine the alternate universe where coffee tasted as a good as it smells, cuz I fucking love the smell of coffee and I'll eat coffee-flavored things (got these coffee hard candies from Colombia that are great), but actual coffee as a drink tastes goddamn nasty.

Meanwhile tea smells and tastes delicious in all its forms.

I mean this is misleading because the world population is exponentially larger and slavery does not form the backbone of most national economies now. (Well, unless you count wage-slavery :p)

But yes the form of wage-labour, on a national scale, is much more feasible than slavery because fundamentally the expense of keeping slaves is actually less than paying them a wage now.

Not necessarily a huge NS cliché, but a cliché in alt history nation RPs in P2TM. It revolves around what people do with Turkey in these RPs. They either make it so the Byzantine Empire never fell so Turkey straight doesn't exist, or they decide to do Erdogan's wet dream and establish a new Ottoman Empire even though most Turks would probably be willing to reduce their country to ash in civil war before letting that happen.

I like alternate history ideas from right after the establishment of the Republic tbh. At the time, Kemalism wasn't really entrenched and solidified, being still a developing ideology, and some thought it was similar to Soviet communism while others compared it to Italian Fascism and Falangism, someone more radical taking over after Atatürk and possibly joining the axis, or on the other hand going full on communist was a real possibility

I think it comes down to people not being super informed about Turkey and Turkish history why they don't do interesting scenarios with it and just try to make it not exist or make it the thing Erdogan thinks of in his sleep. I've considered

Even beyond having Kemalism take a far left or far right turn there's still a lot you can do that's more interesting than surviving Byzantines and neo-Ottomans. You could have Mustafa Kemal die at Gallipoli and then someone else leads the independence war which could lead to Turkey adopting a completely different ideology or even keeping the Ottoman monarchs around as constitutional monarchs. Or for a more modern PoD you could do something around the 2016 coup attempt being a real thing and not a false flag for Erdogan to purge the military, academia and political class. Or you know, just having a popular uprising against Erdogan led by hardcore Kemalists.

I've considered ditching my current NS nation to do a Turkey but I can't be bothered with starting more lore building from scratch when I can barely do any for this nation.

think about it this way, cavirfi
i put hours into writing a factbook, but i'm not sure with how it looks to others, so i go to the rate the an's factbook thread to get a critique
i at least expect this critique to be constructive, decent, and hopefully insightful getting a reply that's just "10/10 i like the colors" or some such shit is none of these things and tells me nothing about how i can improve as a writer or even things that prove that the below nation read the damn thing they could've gotten that comment about colors from an observation of their shit for all i know this is functionally spam, and if you go someplace seeking literally anything but spam you will be rightfully ticked off when you get a response that amounts to nothing but just that- spam.
