"While I mostly find Dr. Marmesont favorably, I fear we may have our differences with regards to stratocracy, eugenics, and extremism. However, what concerns me more than that is the Air Commodore. Why has Dr. Marmesont allowed Air Commodore Auernheimer to keep that military rank? Why was he allowed to rise that high to begin with? The military should be an efficient machine driven by logic, not a place for vile crackpots to spread their bloated, inefficient, illogical, unscientific ideas. In my country, Auernheimer wouldn't even be a private, and would spend all of deployment cleaning toilets. That Auernheimer has this rank and appears to have a trusted position by Dr. Marmesont's side looks unfavorably upon the doctor. If the doctor truly favored technocracy, Auernheimer would have been booted a long time ago, and replaced with a more efficient, logical military officer."

"Supreme ruler of All Reality, huh? It already sounds like a bad, overpowered OC, but the rest of things are even more hilarious... "Cosmic nihilism"? We are not sure if you even know what nihilism means, Yona. And those edgy, over the top quotes from here? One of our zoomers said that it radiates strongly similar vibes from this video, and we agree - it is over the top comical. To further hurt your ego, we are going to refer to you as just Yona. Anyways, let's see what else she has."

"Her lifestory tells us that even the conquerors of universes start off somewhere and weren't always like that. Before that she was a commander of a star fleet, but got shot down by rebels and landed in some backwater planet. There are countless of scenarios how it could have developed further, with some involving you perishing there while being stranded and unable to escape, but you got the lucky lottery and managed to get your ship working. That said, it seems that you weren't too kind to the natives which thanked you for saving their planet from the monsters, but at least you had other plans with the monsters. Either way, we can imagine the desperation you had when you tried to leave the planet by sending distress signals, but nobody answered. While you finally were able to escape the planet you hated, the opinion of natives on you had changed as they started to view as threat, even if you loathed them from the very beginning. As for you going on a conquest spree, yea - that is in character of some people, who can never settle down but always need to push the boundaries by expanding. However, this doesn't excuse your atrocities, because there is always a less destructive way of conquest."

"Now to the politics. Yeah, we already knew that you were a mega warhawk which could make neocons and imperialists shiver in their boots, and even most of expansionists would tell you to cut it out. Her approach to industry and economy sounds something akin to Soviet planned economy, same for her approach on government's involvement in science. While state atheism isn't necessarily a bad idea, the way she goes about it ensures that innocent and moderate religious would be hurt by it, which is something we disapprove of. Sure, innocents have suffered and hard decisions have been made in our quest to defend nation from religious extremists, but this sounds like she deliberately is malevolent. Overall, we are negative on her, because even if she upholds a few views which could be described as good, she still manages to twist them to the point of absurd evilness."

"It is already telling when someone has a separate section for all of the atrocities they have committed, but she does sound very boasting when talking about them - yeah, we know that you are a planet destroyer and commit cruel experiments on other lifeforms, what reason you have to do it other than being cruel? Even in the personal life section she talks about destroying planets, which is both hilarious and sad. Nothing even remotely positive in her quote section, but what else should we expect from someone who is blabbering about being a "Supreme Overlord of All Reality"? That said, it is good that your condescending altitude shows up in the intel about you from start to finish, so whoever reads it knows to stay away from you. Like, do you even feel being like a shallow caricature?"

The Liagolas of the Dominion: "It is the curiosity of the Dominion that this Revolutionary Directorate is a most peculiar body. It reminds the Dominion of its own Domain Council—a body of those most important appendages that self-replicate to keep Liagolas alive. Similarly, the Directorate is not some false, individual personality, but instead a collective, a whole. That pleases the Dominion. At the same time, it is obvious to the Dominion that the Directorate is its own whole—it is not the whole of Karakalpak. It is the regret of the Dominion that a nation which is so close to achieving personhood, so close to achieving completeness, should nevertheless fall so short of that ideal because the governing organ prioritizes itself as a dominion instead of subsuming itself to the nation, just as the people must subsume themselves to the nation.

"But to end on a high note, the Dominion is also pleased to note the Directorate's austerity policies. While it is the suspicion of the Dominion that the Directorate's reasons for prohibition and prudism are different from the Dominion's, it is nevertheless pleasant to see a sister nation—sibling nation. Sibling. The Dominion encompasses all things, it is both all and no genders. Pardon the digression."

In any case, I think Nemo's fundamental principles of good hygiene, a balanced diet, and an adherence to the customary ethics of war are all honourable convictions that I think any reasonable person would share. It's always a somber, somewhat bittersweet twist of irony being the last surviving member of your family - believe me, I know it well - but Nemo has never let the fact define her, and I think that's particularly admirable. When it comes down to it, I think that we all have a lot to learn from the empress, including myself. I think she shows a remarkable sense of modesty, restraint, and charisma that has become all too lacking in government these days, and I wish her nothing but continued success in her post war reforms."

"The nation itself seems like a storyline from a dungeons and dragons session. Luden seems to have been lost to his demonic aspirations for immortality, losing much of what made him truly human, to begin with. I pray God can forgive him for that. As a leader, I am not sure how to discuss him... He seems like a contradiction. He is a contradiction in that he supposedly opposes the systems in place yet he partakes and even lauds power with that system. He is of important note, no doubt, but not for any positive accomplishment or conquest, but rather for his inhuman nature and failure to realize his own goals in a way that does not seem doomed to failure. It should also not go unsaid that his goals themselves are actually quite good, but if his tactics and routs towards to goals will get him there is up for heavy debate." - Protector Johannes-Paul Von Antioch

"You know what they call you in Patagonia, Runner-Up-King? That you look like a fucking weak-chinned mongrel. I don't care if your name is Paul or Antioch because you would be a passing memory to me. You will waste your time rotting in the Senate filled with pompous senators while I live life to the fullest. Great kings carry their empires to short-lived greatness before falling apart and your accomplishment is failing to prevent a civil war. A civil war that you won and now you get to be the King of the Rubble and Looters. I could predict that you're going to write a long diatribe that I wouldn't bother to read after this."

~ Konrad "Caligula" Svoboda, Le Patron of the Most Surreal Confederation of Patagonia

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...
- Not expecting an essay. Just a couple of sentences that shows that you know my work well enough Oxton Arielle Lindall Leslie Vitesse Allison: Their world was an epitome of randomness put into err, let's say quite a large degree. The amount of things that they have done - ranging from a dictatorship, to a society that accelerates in both a political and literal sense, to finally perhaps just being bonkers - eating the rich might have been a little too far, I'm not very sure how to take Mr. Svoboda as a friend. He has a title with Surreal and for a good reason, because half the people here would not understand him in any way, shape, or form. Truly an enigma, but a fascinating one, nonetheless. Quite a terrible choice of words for a leader, though. However, I can see that he does not care for international incidents because that is "how he rolls"! I'll have to watch this with great interest.

ah yes, using Myanmar flag and added a person on their nation flag is interesting, although we do not understand their motives nor the fact that we did not dig into enough information, but for now their are just a almost normal like leader
besides that, we are just trying to understand why their motto is celebrating Burma independence perhaps its their home? or because its their favorite nation?
we do not know yet, but for now we will wait and see

sincerely,

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitragrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. | My NS-Related Art | Hehe bad meme as flag
