That's probably some form of involuntary manslaughter where the death came as a result of negligence, so you'd be looking at around 10 years or so in prison.

The law does not recognise any sort of "war crimes" or "crimes against humanity". If done under our jurisdiction by a citizen or foreigner, these would have no special distinction from regular crimes —manslaughter, murder, rape, robbery, terrorism, et cetera—under law, and thus would be penalised accordingly. If done elsewhere, it is not actionable.

If it does with the intention to serve the state by damaging opponents' population and all profits are given to the state, they will receive no punishment as they are clearly patriotic unofficial agents of the Tsar.

If they do so through illicit means without informing a Commissar while pocketing the profits, they will be severely beaten in places where it will not damage workplace productivity while having their community humiliate them with feces and public shaming. If they continue they are taken into the town square where they will be shot.
