Has anyone wondered what their overall reputation on NS is, like not F7-sugar-coated-aww-darling-participation-token sort of thing but actual brutally honest opinions on them?

Weelllll I'm apparently a generic left-wing democracy...even though I haven't developed my alternate universe yet. There's a planet under development which includes ancient cultures living in a cyberpunk world (Boryxia) and several that incorporate and mash elements of fantasy and science fiction.

Yep. I actually know what mine is:

I am probably regarded as an utter menace to those who couldn't be bothered to write more than three sentences. Also, people mistake me for being a left-winger since I despise lolberts.

Not really sure... I mean, I'd definitely have one, but I'm really not sure what it'd look like lol, I don't have enough of an idea as to how my "contributions" are perceived to give a good answer brutally honest opinions on them?

I can take a guess: IC-wise a generic western democracy (doesn't help that I've put off actually developing lore due to reasons), & OOC-wise — at least, if Discord circa years ago is anything to go by — a piece of [redacted] (again, for reasons), though I wonder that opinion is still held today.

Did I get that right?

Most people don't think very much about other NS players in my experience. Even long-established friend groups on here rarely advance beyond "yeah this person's alright".

The Confederacy winning the war used to be a popular one, but that's died down recently. ~~Not that that fact hasn't stopped people from claiming BCS is one...~~ I feel like if people want to do alt-Americas, there are a few more interesting options -- a red neck workers' nation in West Virginia/Virginia/Kentucky, states just not ratifying the 1787 Constitution and being kicked out of the union like Rhode Island almost was, an entirely-hispanic Southwestern nation, the Confederacy winning the war and having its own Red October, the Native Americans kicking the Europeans out (or at least stopping Manifest Destiny)...
