The Meads of Asphodel – A Canticle for the lost amputees of Aelia Capitolina who have been trampled under the iron shod hooves of salivating Hell Rams and impaled on the shimmering tusks of salvation within the abandoned tabernacle of a Bronze Age myth

In other words — and this is the rock solid principle on which the whole of the Corporation's Galaxy-wide success is founded — their fundamental design flaws are completely hidden by their superficial design flaws.

This song has much more.....disturbing lyrics then I realized when I talked about actually liking this Nine Inch Nails song while hearing it on the radio.

Edit: Meh, I've heard more disturbing lyrics. I think, after reading some comments, I get the intentions of the lyrics more.

You know when that came out, I remember people telling me that they thought the song was literally expressing the desire to fuck an animal. It's kind of shocking that the song got heavy radioplay at that time, but perhaps it was a lyrical tipping point in popular music.

Two years later "Pepper" was a hit song. As long as the song was about violence, and the chorus was sunny and meaningless, nobody cared at all (unless they heard the band's full name).

I really like this song.
Like I, a lot.

Alas yonder woman, damn you tempt me with thy saucy bosom
thus methinks I shall bestow my codpiece in thee & make naughty love to my lady all night
Please haste hither & quench this torment fairest maiden

At first I thought it was about rape. But I think there's more to it than that. I don't know exactly how to put it into words.

And I actually know that song. I hear more songs from the radio then I realize....

I'm actually not against music about violence as long as it isn't exactly supposed to be taken seriously. I mean, one of my favorite bands, Porcupine Tree, has some rather unpleasant lyrics, but last I checked the band isn't exactly trying to promote violence. Sometimes it is just lyrics. Better than only singing about how much you love someone, over and over again, or breakups. I prefer lyrics about other types of things, too.

Grails-Dead Vine Blues

I also listen to a lot of stuff with no lyrics at all, and half the time I don't even know the lyrics of the songs I love, so lyrics aren't that important to me, clearly ☐
