Ahh the newest soul that has caught my curious eye. Ryoshu is a vary prominent soul in her nation and I am curious to see what her plans are. As a librarian I don't think much of her at first glances, I feel it's rare for such meetings to occur like this. But hearing the murmurs of her past I can see why she has such scorn in her eyes. Being around war all your life can sick the life out of you, you man not be able to tell but I share a similar expression. Or every time I recall my life before my imprisonment. I'm glad she is doing relatively well, this is our first interaction but I look forward to our paths crossing. My veiw is rather positive for now."-Luden

So who do we have here? Luden, a person that for most people, he would look very creepy. But after what I've seen, I'm not really fazed by things like this anymore. Maybe that's good, because I would judge you less on how you look, and more on who you are.

When you were little, you were just a regular child like everyone else. One day, your mother became ill and fell to beasthood. So I guess that in your universe, people can turn into beasts. Either that, or 'fall to beasthood' isn't literal. I have to say, what happened to your family is horrible. It effected you pretty deeply. You then met Izeal, and you two became close friends. Its good to see that you are not alone. But unfortunately he was hunted down because of his beasthood. So people can actually turn into literal beasts. Good to know. But then the king ordered the genocide of beasts. I already hate that king. From what I understand reading this, Izeal is as much of a person as everyone else. I've had a fair share of non-human friends, and I don't want them to happen something bad with.

That genocide also had some pretty bad consequences for the country as a whole. Namely a civil war. A civil war where you died in 4 times no less. I wonder how that works. Seems like an interesting topic to research, but biology isn't my specialty. But anyways, you were captured by the "King of Corpse," a name that sounds like it belongs in a Dark Souls game. He then handed you over to some organization that deals with immortals, where they did some unethical experiments on you. Ok, I'm all for science, but when I do an experiment, the only person I bring in danger is myself... ok and maybe some willing volunteers but they know the dangers. Luckily you were able to escape because of the chaos of the war, and resurfaced becoming the "King of the Corpses," a ruler title that sounds pretty cool, but also a bit worrying. Hopefully that name doesn't mean a reign of evil or something.

As for your goals... wait... hold on... spaceships? Cybernetics? I thought the industrial era had just started in your world, but no. Your country is already quiet advanced. How the heck is the country still under an absolutist system? You know what... maybe I'm just assuming that civilization develops the same in your world as in mine. And since you are immortal, it is very possible that you led the country for a few hundred years. Maybe you even reformed the monarchy and used a constitutional system

"It's actually much more simple. When I was found out during the Civil War. I was placed in a cell. Back then I remember we had cars that were way different and were just starting to use flintlock pistols and blunderbusts thanks to the powder keg industry, they were pretty neat back then I remember. But I was imprisoned for so long I think there was around eleven different rulers had reigned over Lowblood. And needless to say time varies greatly in between rulers. I only was able to know more about the future because as times changed so did the tests they put me through" - Luden

"Well, as one should expect I have a huge deal of respect for female leaders. Quite often we have to be our own biggest supporters, and while true for any leader it's especially true for any leader from a marginalised group, be it women, LGBT+ community, people of colour, as we are often faced with every personal criticism from all directions from people across the world. Dr Natalie Liang has shown that she is a strong woman, one that has seen the other side of war as the victor, and for that she has my utmost respect.

The research she has aided is also a great source of respect from me. My personal favourite quote of hers is about how interesting she finds how small we as people truly are, and how there is more to explore. I am not too sure on her stances on social issues, but we both seem to share the same goal of moving our people and humanity forward, and for that I only have agreement and support. I would love to personally have a conversation with Dr Natalie Liang, and should the UNEEU's work ever bring it to the Hutteric Union, just know they alongside Natalie would receive my personal welcome." - President Loreta Martin

You have done nothing but betray the very values you've wished to uphold. You pray to your God, yet you turn your back to him so you can sin in this world. You spit on his word so you can take pride in your country, feel wrath for your enemies, and murder your own people for your gain. You betrayed the revolution over ideological differences. China is gone, the USSR is gone, and it is your fault they have devolved into little more than fascist hellholes. Speaking of fascists, take a good long look at your nation, dead man. What is your legacy? You invaded Vietnam, you annexed Dominica, you desired a world with America at its center at the cost of everyone else. You imperialized as much as the British did, and for what? Because you're too American to believe that there is a better world than one where everyone is cooped up in suburbia waiting for papa government to give them a welfare check so they can spend it at a strip mall?

I cannot deny your contributions to the socialist cause within your country. But your actions have done more harm for your country, its people, and those outside of it than good. Your 'contributions' to society allowed Michael Dugan to destroy China. You allowed the continuation of an 'esoteric' America filled with manchildren who think that being edgy makes them politically viable. You and your country will be remembered in the same way by the people of the world - the dreamer willing to destroy all others for their own pathetic gain."

It is not often I get to see a leader who also has dark skin. Let alone one born in the state of Tanzinia pre-unification with Zanzibar. Though there isnt much different about you from other socialist leaders, I do enjoy the feeling of rating someone who isnt an andriod,catgirl, or a German colonist.

As a child, it appears he was subjugated to the lifestyle of civilwar and conflict in his homeland, he also burned people at the stake? Which eventually lead him to become a soldier and rise up the ranks. He fought off poachers and captured the CEO of a Poacher corporation....

However the UNNOG, I think it was? Seems like it would be a small feat for our army, They dont seem to be the nation you steam roll with one regiment though. I am suprised he managed to win, having such an inferior army.

It seems that this woman here is also a socialist/ Ultra Nationalist, but from Southern America. One issue I have is that more of her views are arbitrary than others I've seen.

She supports equality but considers foreigners "Rats" and the United States "Cancer". She also condones chemical weapons, which in my eyes is unnecessary. If you can't beat a nation without using dangerous gases and poisoning their soldiers. It means you can't beat that nation at all. I may have chosen my own safety over the people, but I would never stoop to such a level.

Unlike me however, She seems to be one that actually cares about her nation, more than I did when I first took power. She is willing to fight until she is "800% dead" I think that's an overexaggeration but I am not one to judge. I do believe she would offer her life to protect such a nation like this one. Which usually earns my respect, regardless of one's views.

All in all I'd give her a 7/10.

She'd happily resort to chemical weapons, however, only when the circumstances are "favorable" despite holding on to a nuclear first strike policy so dearly... And she's not at all socialist beyond favoring the people. I mean, she seized power for herself by force... With herself in mind. Isn't that a little... Against socialist/communist values?

It seems that this, Nerias man, has gone mad. probably from the trauma and age of his brain, these can make people go crazy. He seems more fitting for an asylum than a Papal office, yet he seems to have a positive influence, so perhaps the madman is a better alternative to whatever/whoever else might have come into power.

"Ah, Theodoric Siculo. Truly, I don't think I could name a more corrupt man. He murdered his own brother in cold blood. Even if they have resorted to organized crime elements, that is no way to treat family. And worse, he took power over his dominion as an emperor, grinding his people under his heel. They are nothing more than meat to be thrown into the grinder in his eyes. Somehow, he managed to add the active war crime that is using napalm on civilians to the mix. The Kala Lexi says that we are supposed to love one another, and that no one is beyond redemption, but this man manages to strain my belief in that concept. He hasn't broken it, however, and if he were to change his ways, I would gladly welcome him as a comrade in arms. Unfortunately, that seems less and less likely as time goes on."

"Æthelric seems to be the modernised h to an end of absolutist monarchy and transition to a constitutional monarchy, a figurehead, at the mercy of incompetent parliamentarians. It is quite the tragic sight, and one done by his own hands. However, that isn't to strictly confirm that his risky policies as such as giving potential dissenters an ease of mind with the government not looking through their personal activities. It could despite the unlikeliness to take away their false disenfranchisement with the regime. Quite the risk, and one I myself wouldn't be taking, it is more wiser to never give theoretical enemies a moment's rest before giving them a chance to become real. Nevertheless, he is not so much the foolish libertarian as he ensures the keystone industries of his economy remain protected and under state control, not sold off to the highest bidder. I commend him for that, as those who try to sell off their country's resources as far worst than counterrevolutionaries. Kleptocracy must be halted before it's greedy claws bring ruin to an once prosperous nation. Now overall, my stance is pleasantly neutral as I find little interest in criticizing his social policies as how a citizen's lifestyle is no concern of mine by how they behave, dress (if at all), and whom they seek to marry. It only becomes one if it undermines the interest of the State, and the New Order Doctrine that ensures the prosperity of the Technocratic Republic."

But hey, this little eyepatch wearing prick's a bit worse than the old man; to be honest with you. I usually don't throw around comparisons to Stalin, or even Hitler for that matter; but his little cult of personality he's got there isn't too different from those two... out of his mind, and that title of his? Yeah; he fits all the criteria.

What's next on your list of views, o' 'Iron Chancellor'? National socialism?”

A sad story indeed. A man who only worked to better his Armenia, only to see his people to rise up and rebel, then proceed to kill his father. Quite a sad story for such a short one. Little information is given, but that little information tells a story of 10,000 words.

I do not have much more to make an opinion on. Though I do hope he won't meet his father's fate.

"Ortiz is a raging bull in a China shop, and I'm not fond of wild beasts on the loose. They must be euthanized before causing further trouble. I do directly mean Ortiz as the case to be put down for the greater good. Her antics have undermined the pursuit of peace by removing rogue actors such as herself from power. Her drunken insistence on jingoism will bring the world to brink of nuclear holocaust and her belief that Gonswanza will survive the fallout is utterly delusional. It boggles my mind why anyone tolerates her destructive leadership. Is it because she removed the competent brass with zealots, or are people genetically design to be insane? If so, it would justify the international community to mobilize against Ortiz. She's a threat, and her vision must not be allowed to manifest. It will cost countless years of progress to get to this relatively peaceful point in human history, and we mustn't allow this mad witch to ruin what we made of it."

"Ah John Mercer. A leader who rules with an iron fist. I dislike them and their beliefs. But I must say his origin is amazing to study. He reminds me a lot of myself, a man from the slums becoming a leader. He also led his country through a civil war which I am amazed at. Not many people have the ability to reunite a nation. Despite being impressed with his story i'll probably stay away from him."

"What are we doing...going back in time? Nonetheless-this "Chief General" seems indistinguishable from any other partisan. Sure, he's fighting for a good cause and all; but why would a few Jewish partisans trust an ex-deadbeat drunk who'd turned to constant smoking? You'd think you'd want a leader in good shape, right? He may be quite the strategist, but I don't think he should be heading an...'underground state'."

For a man who claims to be the King of Armenia, he seem to be more suited to rule in Bulgaria based on appearances alone. Then again, the rulers of the old world do like to inbreed with the tight nit royal families. makes me wonder what deformities he is hiding. Well, we will see if it impairs his ruling, poor child just took to the throne, really quite shame what happened to his father, not that he didn't have it coming.

"Mm, yes what of this Southern Cross Emperor, as they call him. Theodoric Siculo... absolutism was his first mistake, and I'm sure there will be many to come, so as it is that his style of governance is unsustainable for long periods of time... just ask Louis the 16th! Furthermore, whilst I am a civic nationalist and paternal conservative myself, the complete opposition to any progressivism within his nation, and his stance on dispersal of power leads me to believe that his Gothic Crimea is one step away from returning to bloody feudalism! This blatant regressivism gives me visions of revolution, both black and red... so I say, tread lightly Emperor Siculo. However, I at least must admire his ability to unify several states into a functioning nation, but that is about the extent to which my admiration goes. To me, all and all, Siculo has potential as a leader, and his nation the same, but with the current handling of the state, I see nothing but blood and tears on the horizon for him and his state..." - Marshal Wilhelm Fatilly

"Absolutism was the first mistake? Rich from someone who by these notes appears to have issues with weak-willed governments. You might wish to avoid such hypocrisy, as you led a rotten country that requires a strong leader and one that can only be guided by an iron hand, and not the care for the complains of an uneducated and unwashed masses that knows not yet what it good for them. You are the Despot, born by your misfortune, to turn Liberia for the better, and not allow as you have the savages to run wild. You may think otherwise, but you've done well as an firm leader, but to be advised to only appoint those you deem worthy to succeed you, and not make the people decide who shall replace you. It will end in failure and all that you built, destroyed and buried to history. "
