Yes, but it only generates a cropped shot of the head. If you want more than a tight square image you have to use something else.

I'm pretty sure I once used The Sims 3 to make my national leaders on Gandoor waaaaaaaaaay back in the day. Honestly I'm surprised using Sims isn't a more common method, but I guess that still requires effort and some people might be too lazy for even that.

Me and my 293 Sims 4 mods and CCs.

Yeah, I know Sims 3 has more gameplay, but since I got Sims 4 for free (Origin did a giveaway way back in 2019), I did quite a handful of my characters on it, because more often than not, it is super difficult to get exactly the looks that you want because I deadass cannot draw and art to save my life.

Perhaps the only time where I actually preferred the game over graphics because well, I need the graphics. 🤔

I'd actually consider making images of my leaders for this nation in TS4 but I'm too lazy, even though I literally play the game every damn day. (And considering what a lot of my mods I've got are, it could help with pictures of historical leaders from centuries ago)

Also just learned the minimum GPU requirement for Sims 4 is a GPU from 2004, what the hell, literally can run that game on a toaster.

My Secretary of the military Delutaya?

Sample video https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=5bP-3JC_614. I remember commenting on live chat at that very moment but it's not there. Does YouTube has filtering option via moderators as a shadow filter certain users? I could see my Chat at the unlisted videos.

Eh, IDK how other people do their election threads, but mine are always very clear that any poll involved in the thread is a 'Who do you hope wins the election' and not what will actually determine the electoral results.

imagine not having like five warlords, an admiral who came to power in a coup, an angry merc with a gun, an ai battleship, a populist syndicalist being dommed by a state-capitalist power, some crazy commander's daughter he put in a crown, and a literal pocket calculator as your leaders tbh I really think you could just keep Bailey as the pov character and let her go vibe in the Louisiana backwoods if you'd want to. I mean, it's not like she's that important to BCS' operation anyways. Having a former president as the character used on F7 would be pretty novel too, imo.

Ah, this is precisely why I keep Baizou frozen in the year 2004—much easier than actually seeing the calendar progress. ^^;

Again, "cliche" is too strong a word, and it'd be better to say "trope" in this case, but I am rather impressed by how many nations actually progress through time, even through real time. Like, whoa! Instead of doing as I do and vainly trying to manufacture permanence by freezing my fiction in place, folks actually embracing the relentless passage of time? That's guts.
