Why is it that this thread has just become a place for people to vent that something did not fulfill their expectations (many of which are unrealistic)

Because people these days just skim through factbooks and go from images, disregarding information written with said images.

This is why The Archetypal Future Tech Space Empire exists for a reason.

To be fair, your equipment page (which is generally what people look at for militaries) only has WW2/WW1 tech in it. You also have 11 different factbooks, which is a whole lot for someone to read.

No, I didn't. Because you have 11 factbooks. That's a lot of factbooks. Fuck, I have 8 and I only expect people to read 1 or 2, maybe 3 at most.

And yet you've only read the 'Weaponry, Uniforms and Field Gear' Factbook and when off on that. So, basically, 'They only got weapons from WW1/WW2' and completely disregard most of the military vehicles factbook.

Your air force consists of Biplanes. "Weaponry, Uniforms, and Field Gear" type factbooks should give a full perspective of the nation's military capabilities. Not, "Oh, well I have these two obscure factbooks that say I have mechs, why don't you know I have mechs?"

And it is also not helpful when information on your special forces unit factbook is also vague and simple goes like 'Operation: Anaconda', 'Mission accomplished', 'Planes blown up'.

- A. It's not special forces, it's more comparable to the CIA
- B. I actually had someone in the "AN's best factbook/dispatch" thread say that was my best one, so clearly it's not that bad
- C. I'm trying to be creative, and SASOU is meant to be extremely secretive
- D. I don't whine and complain when people ignore SASOU
- E. It's just there to show what I've done with SASOU, and gives an idea of the type of ops they perform

And most importantly...

I probably shouldn't say this, since I still have to actually make a factbook on the Paramilitary itself, but your vehicles, weaponry, aircraft, warships and military rations factbooks could (and probably should) be merged into one bigger factbook that has all of them, separated via five spoilers (one for each category), while the "Uniforms" and "Field Gear" sections of the weaponry factbook, alongside the war crimes factbook, could be integrated into the "Imperial Armed Forces" factbook. Hell, I'd argue that integrating as much stuff into that factbook would be optimal, seeing as the majority of those 10 (come on, shouldn't the "what if it were an Imperial Guard Regiment" factbook be under the Trivia section anyways?) factbooks really do seem more like sections of a bigger, universal one.

In other words, it just seems to me like you're spreading your military content too thinly, especially given how most of them are mere tables that give you barely no information outside of name, country of origin, and production numbers. Hell, I'd say that your factbooks in general (apart from some of the leader ones, especially Oswald's) do suffer from a lack of content, to be honest. For example, and apologies if I'm being too blunt, but there's genuinely nothing regarding your history that aren't a couple of lines on a Great War and Colonialism (aside from the sidebars, which do have a lot more information than the main content...). Like, there is potential, but I'm seeing it all be unexploited. Please, do take my advice, it'll make everyone's, including your, time here easier.

Right, so with that out of the way, I'd like to present a potential new cliché: People that only make posts out of your sidebars / first paragraphs. I've... been hit by this one recently, to be honest.

- THE FOEHN PARAMILITARY REGIONS -

"The true enemy is still hiding in the shadows."

1986, Yuri's Epsilon Army is close to taking over the world, and a paramilitary organization tries to hold what's still free from his control.

Well maybe, just maybe, you should:

- Accept the fact that your military is NOT all powerful
- Make it so that nations don't have to rummage through 11 factbooks to find the thing that you think would allow you to beat an MT or PMT nation.

Not to mention the fact that a mech can be easily taken out with modern airstrikes or FT Orbital Bombardments seriously though, why do people seem forget the vast majority of (post-WW1, and arguably even before that) military stuff isn't the actual fighting, but is rather supplying the fight? I get describing how big gun go pow is more fun than the complex system of logistics needed to make sure that the big gun is maintained, armed, bureaucratically approved, moved around, etc, but come aaaaaan.
