Their leader is a slave trader, apparently, and his power stems from the wealth of his trading empire that has allowed him to recruit a personal army. (Judging by the sig, it seems this suzerainty may be only de facto, and not recognised by the larger Egyptian Khedivate or other nations that may exist; however, I don't have enough info to say for sure.)

The Speech of Orion was delivered the Crown Princess, of the time, Ceriss during the Soul Crisis in 722 AA to hostile soldiers. It was intended to persuade the Orialian forces to cede the city and withdraw their support from their then-leader, Bishop-Protector Orius, managed to achieve this purpose, and following the speech the Orialian garrisoning forces defected to Iciaros.

BN, if you could please use something other than "we are big" or "we are commies", that would be greatly appreciated.

The Governor of Sudan, Zuhair Mansur, is a slave trader and a regional warlord. Given he exists in 1872, before Europe started forcing the Africans to stop taking slaves, this is not surprising.

Who says we didn't face rebellions along the way? Though we never actually conquered the nations under our "control". Our organization is a voluntary association of free states. Meaning nations can opt in and opt out when they want. Also, is this all you could think of? Lame.//skip//

Al-Zubayr Rahma Mansur (Arabic: الزبير رحمة منصور) (also Sebehr Rahma, Rahama Zobeir) is a slave trader.

Oh..

He de facto rules his trading empire, backed by a personal army, controlling much of the Bahr el Ghazal as well as what are parts of what Europeans call Chad and the Central Africa

Ohhhh f*ck!
