Depends on who catches you and whose grave it was. From a good beating to public execution.

Denigrating the nation and the ruler in public.

I don't know about that bombing, but bombing anything... corrective labour on principle, and if anybody came to harm you'll of course be beheaded. ...we like beheading, it really helps to reform the offender:

Disobedience to a police officer?

Not a crime, unless it involves violence which will result in mandated 1-month community service and a 1,000 fine.

Beheading a person?

Well, there would be a reprimand as the sexes are kept separate. Such might show on one's record, with indecent exposure often resulting in ten or more lashes. Should the behavior continue, such usually increases the risk of being sent to the State Mines.

Wouldn't have time to punish them, as the business owner's .50 cal Barrett sniper and their mandatory arsenal of weapons would blast the dude.

Illegal ownership of explosives, war material and anti-material weaponry - will depend on the context and reason of the crime. If such weaponry was in the hands of a civilian due to an innocent reason (like, a inheritance kept from a past wartime), the mere confiscation of such device. If attested that the civilian bought it on purpose, up to 3 to 6 years in jail. If the civilian is a member of a criminal or terrorist organization, up to 20 to 30 years in jail.

Profanating a national monument.
