You have any specific favorites?

Earth-Crooked Axis for String Quartet

Bad with names, but everything in the second half was awesome.
Edit: and the vocals on the first half was great as well. So its difficult to say favorites.

Well, I didn't expect the entire list to be that highly received...Pleasant surprise.

I am very open to new music. There are only a few genres I really dislike.

Having an open mind to music is very rewarding to me.

Listening to new music is like a hobby of mine, but I'm so backlogged right now I'm trying NOT to add anything else new. Of course, I generally fail at that.

It always amazes me how many people have vast tastes on NationStates, and know the names of bands that aren't very popular at all like it is nothing.

Yeah. If it wasn't for NationStates, over 50% of the bands I know, at least, I wouldn't of ever found, or if I did, I wouldn't of found them as soon.

About 25% is my own research and the other 25% my dad.

Though I did find a LOT of bands by myself so that might be a BIT higher.

Earth-Sonar and Depth Charge

Earth is in fact a band I found because of a mixture of NationStates AND my dad.

I could listen to BM now, but I'm in a mood for slower music so I'm still on Earth.

I got into slower stuff from my chess tutor. Always good to play chess with Doom.

I'm back to black metal now. I had a sudden craving for this song.

I swear, in some ways, they can all lead to each other somehow

You could probably do one of those threads I've seen on IMDb where people connect movies to each other by actress/actor name, and they can go on forever. I don't really remember how they work because I haven't seen one in ages though. But you could probably do that with music and go on for a while...

My memory is weird, because I remember some weird, completely irrelevant and pointless things, but forget some much more major things.
