It is an island east of Japan. A former colony (presumably of Spain) until 1898, the country was in a state of anarchy until WWI and the Russian Revolution, where it sided with the Bolsheviks. Then the island was occupied by the Entente (and became a major center for prostitution), and later on, tried to resist against Imperial Japan. In the early Cold War, there was a pro-western bloc government until a coup in 1959, in which the new government again sided with the Soviets. They were secretive and mostly closed until 1985, where they reformed into a socialist market economy that can conduct trade with western capitalist countries, but still rejects economic liberalism.

The Technocratic Party of their government favors decreasing defense spending in order to boost R&D spending. The Godulans would find this idea silly, as the military usually does a goodly chunk of the R&D itself.

That they have preferred "non-interference" to total isolation, which, though seems to be slightly far-fetched, has benefited Hatsunia in the long run.

Their largest senate political faction is known as Crimson Dawn, who are center left in overall outlook.

I find this an interesting tidbit, because 'Crimson Dawn' is the name of a Godulan cherry brandy that is considered their national drink.
