The sound of a FREAKING LIGHTNING BOLT OUT OF NOWHERE THAT HAD TO OF HIT LESS THEN A MILE FROM MY HOUSE. Holy shit that was the loudest thunder I've ever heard.

Technically, thunder is the sound of lightning, so you heard the thunder from the bolt, not the lightning itself.
Also: that's so cool! Wish I could've heard it.

everyone knows that quote, "I know not what weapons World War Three will be fought, but World War Four will be fought with sticks and stones," but in a way it's optimistic and inspiring because it suggests that even after destroying civilization and returning to the stone age we'll still be sufficiently globalized and bellicose to have another world war right then and there

Yeah, true.

I wish I was looking outside when it happened...I wanted to see the bolt.

Trust me, it startled us all, even with my sister and I seeing the flash. My mom didn't even see the flash. It was so damn loud. It seriously shook the house more then any thunder has ever done. The whole brief storm was weird. After that there were only 3 other rumbles, far apart from each other, before it ended. One of them was far off and rattled the glasses on the table...Yeah, it was a strange storm.

Therapy? - Six Mile Water

I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.
