For murder in Beatrixia, the minimum sentence is 10 years in a Reform Through Labour camp. The case will be reviewed every five years until the individual is deemed genuinely regretful and fit to be released into society.

Execution by whomever just so happens to be on the aircraft. And by their own means, too. Just pray it's a quick bullet to the brain in place of being mauled or tossed out of the aircraft entirely.

Not a crime in and of itself as it would be violating federal anti-prohibition laws, but if you do actually fuck up, being drunk would make the punishment more severe (i.e. larger fines/prison sentences for a car accident, etc.)

Being a union member and going on a strike?

Not neccesarily a crime, but if the strike is unorderly, causes property damage, etc. then you could get in trouble, fined for the damages caused and sent to prison.

Neglecting farm animals.

The very act buys you a life in prison, and depending on the state a one-way trip to the afterlife.

Refusing service to others based on race, sex, religion or sexual orientation.

Although Khantashonia doesn't have the death penalty, if the person doesn't surrender, they have a high chance of being executed on sight. If they do surrender, they will be forced to undergo an extensive mental health checkup. If they were confirmed insane (because what sane person would steal a tank?), they are to be relocated to a mental hospital until they fully recover. If they were completely sane, however, they could either be forced to do hard labour or be exiled into another state as punishment.

-the tank will be recovered too, if not damaged too much-

any form of child abuse

Now that is one broad term. Sexual abuse against a minor is punished by death penalty, plain and simple. If it's something along the lines of yelling at a child, it could go as low as just a fine and a warning.

Urinating in public.

Not a crime but depending on where you live and how often you do it the response from neighbors could range from general disapproving stares the next morning to even something as severe as a knock on your door followed by an uncomfortable conversation about how annoying it is, although if you've a good reason your neighbors will likely be much more lenient and forgiving.

Taking a Hostage during a standoff with law enforcement, not the punishment for the standoff, but any additional punishment for the hostage-taking.

No punishment. Government officials and their families are protected and even defended by the state if they "kill/scar the right people". If they don't, then they're still excused, albeit receive a small fine.

AN:

Execution. Plain and simple.

Inciting a rebellion and committing war crimes against your people?

Emigration is perfectly legal. Active military personnel defecting to another country is considered desertion and can entail jailtime or, during wartime, death.

The homie will be very dishonored and after a short trial with the perp being charged with dishonorable offense, homie will most likely attempt to challenge perp to a duel on non-lethal weapons. Lakans do it all the time, in extreme cases resorting to deadly weapons.
