This bring somewhat true. Once you are sitting on the throne you are destined to die. It's almost as a trap for someone like yourself.

I'm sure you deal with those that oppose you in a rather quiet manner. In lowblood we outright kill them.

But from the last time I heard you speak to a king of Corpses, sure it was on a prison TV but I couldn't help but to think you put alot of study into our people and nation.

Which makes me smile knowing that someone our there understands the position a king of Corpse can be in.

But to call us primitive is a joke. I feel like we are different than the last time you casted your gaze upon us, Mercer.

And as an immortal, knives have been thrust into my back and my front. But none have made me fall.

I have reached space through the combination of science and magic. And I intend on going until my body truly reaches its limit.

As for the expansion you should join us. We've his the great seas there's alot out there. And what lies in them is truly remarkable as well as horrifying, I'm sure you'll fit right in. Maybe we could enjoy some giant crab together!"-Luden

"Well, about the Drussian leader, I think of the members of his family who have already assumed the throne, he would be the least willing to face the adventure of invading another nation from another region without any historical or cultural connection with Drussian just because it has a different ideology. (and by the way, his father really was a hypocrite). [ooc: I'm the same player from Gustatopolis and Drussian]

My opinion of you is that you are an interesting leader, despite your less serious personality and being a little too liberal. I am a conservative but pragmatic leader, so our diplomatic relations would be neutral. I think you would get along well with my successor, Alexander Odibiano Corteza, who will be sworn in as leader of Gustatopolis on July 1st.

"Born in an artificial womb? Quite an interesting way of being introduced to this world of wolves. Despite the lifetime ban on alcohol may spill the end of Lavinia as a consequence of an unnatural birth as her liver is too weak. Otherwise, your service is a mess as it is hard to tell what side you fought for, and what this war was about. I recommend getting a new biographer to clear the word salad. Next, Lavinia's governance is frankly impractical and leaves room for kleptocratic opportunists to overthrow her with the entrusting of the people, and regular forces to remain forever loyal to her regime while creating absurd decrees to erase the natural prejudice the one holds to others by another. Even the most crazed dictators would have an agency that answers directly to them, to eliminate potential dissent in the ranks of the military, the police, and general society that oppose their silly visions for their country. It is advised that you overhaul this disastrous system before you find yourself without a tomorrow."

The factions have always been side by side no matter what, and they will become even closed with eachother, learning eachother's ways. Technogardens are will make our nature even more lush, and art of the Golden Age is as important as it's better preserved scientific legacy, for during our Golden Age, culture and science have been going hand in hand. Our utopian dream and idealism are what made and make us what we are. Awesomized dudes, who chill and fight for justice and freedom. And booze. Aspiring to become stronger and united. Without them, what we would have been? A bunch of backstabbing heartless bastards with no regard for human lives. And we couldn't have achieved even quarter of what we have, as factions would be fighting eachother.

Dude doesn't want to understand us, a society with a radically different ideas than his own. He rationalizes his disdain and just says it, foremost for himself, that our society ain't gonna last. As a coping strategy. Cuz doesn't wanna lost his power, as he went through the hell to earn it. Like... dude started a civil war and won. And doesn't wanna let it go, cause otherwise, he will have to leave Rapture and begin again. This time... I assume in some faraway casino, where some assholes have tested chemical weapon. Provided he gets away. And if he doesn't... some dude gonna beat him with a golf club. That's why he doesn't want to admit, that more libertarian countries are viable. He wants to show his people, that only his regime is correct. Understandable. A successful society with ideals, radically opposing one's makes one at least concerned about competition. We, Sky Reavers, are no exception. And I gotta admit that.

One correction about Drussian is that the country has been ruled the same way and by the same family since 887, so it's not a reactionary government because the power structure has never changed since then. Kind of unrealistic if we consider events like the French revolution and the Russian revolution, but I was how I thought the roleplay of the nation: A young ruler who tries to modernize his reactionary culture nation without ending up being remembered as the ruler responsible for destroying his monarchy. Because of this, the beginning of his rule was marked by the attempts of his reactionary uncle trying to get rid of him and reverse what he is doing: for a week he stayed in power calling himself Nicolaus XI. The lore of the nation seems kind of nonsensical, but I want to leave the country with a kind of The Crown atmosphere.

But I liked your leader's speech, it was good one.

"Passion and mercy, two traits are equally as admirable as they at times impractical. One can be passionate for it draws people to them, and allows for connection and growth of the individual and their community. Mercy, ensures the sparing of one's life from harm, however, the latter is impractical and a fruitless goal to persist. Not all are worth saving, not all can be saved from certain dangers, and most deserve the axe, while the rest try to survive but are simply victims of life's cruel surprises. This does not mean forfeiting the rescue mission, you must do your best to save those that can be saved. Only recognize that not everyone will make out alive. Overall, the Mistresses strangely have my approval as they are needed asset for the world."

While I can't understand how could tolerate living in a place that not only isn't high in the sky, but is in fact deep under the sea, which concerns me for your mental health, I can see some similarities between us. We both had to kill our rival to power. Of course your rival was already in power, so your ascension was more of a revolution, which I really don't like much, while mine was a duel before either of us had true power, but the similarities are still there. And while I don't support all of your views, they do seem pretty good, so on the whole I would say of all the human leader I have seen, you are certainly my favorite. Also one of the better looking ones, though it seems an eye may have been lost somewhere.

Lissy: So what do we think of this guy, Hilda?

Hilda: Well, I definitely can't speak for you. He seems like the kinda guy who'd be fun to go drinking with.

Lissy: The last time you went drinking we had to invent a new timezone. But yeah, this Liam guy seems chill, but in a predator kinda way? Like he knows no one's gonna touch him. And I guess we can relate, huh?

Hilda: Dude runs a mob more than he runs a country, which, y'know, fine. But he'd still probably act all high and mighty about the fact that we've wholly embraced authoritarianism. But why shouldn't we? But I'm getting off track. Liam seems like a pretty cool dude, perhaps we could get to know him if he doesn't decide to be a holier-than-thou dick like so many humans are.

Lissy: I wonder if he'd step down if his people so desired. I mean, he seems pretty popular, so I'm guessing it's a non issue for the time being. And I don't know much about what passes for a government in the Reavers' territory, so I'll probably sound really stupid if they do adhere to a legit democracy. He can claim to be anti-authoritarian if he likes, but taking power through a duel, even if some dudes asked for it, seems like a might-makes-right attitude. But there's definitely something about this guy. We'll get to know him one of these days, yeah?

Hilda: Sounds good, as long as he can be polite.

For the relevant F7 threads, the girl on the left is Hilda, and the one on the right is Melissa (Lissy).

A class 13.8 civilization, according to this thingy. Assuming the Mistresses stay home. They probably will, they're actually pretty lazy.

Paramount Leader
Zhao Xuefeng

"You know, it increasingly seems that whenever I am called upon to provide an opinion on the leader of a foreign power, they are stranger than the last. Now, these two are purported to wield preternatural powers, the precise nature of which remains unclear, that they gained in the process of 'shattering'. I must admit, I am lacking in familiarity with these concepts, but whatever the reality may be they have succeeded in carving out a sizeable dominion for themselves within North America."

"While I have never held the United States in particularly high regard, these developments remain... concerning, to say the least. The reports regarding their views on humanity, and what they do to humans in their territory, while perhaps mere rumours, do little to help their case. Still, I shall refrain from judging until the situation becomes more clear. Perhaps they could be a valuable ally, or indeed a deadly threat."

wandering if communism is really that bad

So, who do we have here... Yet another victim of the demise of the most loyal and rightful political hierarchical system of authoritarian monarchy- oh, poor, poor Russian people! Neither the less I wonder how exactly and why was a simple conscript chosen by Stalin himself to be a general, considering the fact that said conscript was interested in other forms of socialism, which I believe at some point included Trotskyism.. Why would he be even interested in left ideologies in the first place? Weren't it the ideologies that have made him and his family balance on the brink of survival in the first place eh? Moving on I can only commend his military service record- well done, splendid job defending the city! I hope that one day I'll be able to replicate your success in the field and truly prove my ability to rightfully command as a Military Police officer... Finally about your rule and policies... Eh let's just say that we've got more than one points or disagreements... Especially regard8nf the whole democracy thing...
