However, I do applaud you for embracing free trade, as we would like to expand our market to other nations... er tribes? I can also see that your position is secured as you value loyalty over hereditary succession. I can understand, as you don't know if those little brats will even look after your legacy. He looks like a good military, but he needs more prudence. He was injured by practicing sword fights, something that was important in the past, but that I consider he took too seriously.

He will be married with someone more important than him, but that's not bad, that means that he knows how to get a better life instead of trying to achieve the best one, something that is really difficult and risky.

Ex-Nation

Something good of him is that he has international support, which is always good.

Also he is a good-hearted christian, of good manners, and very fancy. He comes from a nice family too!

My opinion is fully postive.

They'll most likely do a good job of overseeing the Empire during the crisis, probably."
