A nation chronicling the fate of the world after the end of Code Geass. Despite the name, the British Isles are not part of the Empire (see the history factbook for more information).

Aside from Florida being underwater Atlantis; the way this version of the US came about is delightfully cursed. The National Redemption Party is made out of American Nazis and Klan members who overthrew the Kennedy administration for attempting to pass a civil rights bill. They molded the US into an entirely different thing where they worship the Founding Fathers as messengers of the Aryan god and views the US as Hyperborea against Judeo-Masonic influences.

A couple of things for them:

- The fact that the Second Korean War happened decades later after the First Korean War. I assume that the First Korean War is in parallel with the RL equivalent, so yeah, that, and there was no US or many other countries this time.

- The United States of America was... certainly different. I'm sorry if this was too vague, but I mean different as in like "I would expect you to be bigger than ever" but since USA is not too big here, it's a good change of pace. That, and it reminds me of this one story from r/WritingPrompts, something about the countries isolating from each other for 25 years, BUT the twist was that the rest of the world lied and developed and flourished, while the Americans, true to their words, did not peek outside and as a result, lost out because they weren't in on the development thing.

Spoilers ahead, that Premier Livi Husk was an absolute bastard, and died without anyone by his side. Which is most very likely an allegory to not be mean to people, yup.

And in a general sense, the fact that it's a trope on the Crapsack World, or the Crapsack people. As far as I have read, almost everything will either end up bittersweet, with a dark twist, or someone dies like a Happy Tree Friends character.

Until relatively recently, part of their police force was considered part of the Army, and before then they'd been a sort of Royal Guards.

Their universe has their equivalent of America, which is boldly self-aware as the self-proclaimed global policeman, a relatively democratic system, and oppression of minorities. Unlike the US, however, they are governed by a collective body, as opposed to a presidential republic.

They like to get around in combat by chucking spears and then making those spears really heavy, subsequently getting dragged along by the now-very-heavy spears. I'm starting to see a recurring trend in the user's puppets, what with all the grim FFT parodies of looney tunes logic.
