Depends on what, where, why and how it was burned, but the baseline penal term for arson is:

5 years of external medium-security imprisonment and the payment of a fine equal to the projected losses the fire did to the property's owner or inhabitant.

Defamation of a government official can result in a minimum of 2 years of prison. Considering this is on the milder end of what defamation would be (upwards to serious accusations proven to be falsehoods), it would likely be closer to 2 years.

Multiple penalties are applied, from concealment of the corpse, failure to report a crime, omission of help (if the victim was still alive) and to make matters worse, you would still be treated as an accomplice in the crime of homicide with an aggravating factor of driving under the influence. At the very least, he'll get 30 years in prison.

Corporal punishment in general is not illegal. Causing injury that requires medical attention, however, would be battery. Basic battery will net you a fine equivalent to a few hundred USD.

Depends on the pyramid scheme. If it is something mild like chain mailing, then it is not an offense. However, some others that involve sending money can constitute extortion and coercion and can result in a sentence of as high as 25 years in prison.

NS stats (civil rights/economy/political freedoms) mostly NOT canon. There are some civil rights and liberties and political freedoms in Vertillia but the government is mostly authoritarian, especially when it comes to immigration, climate change, crime, and punishment.
