"I find the American President (Renkin) to be a very interesting fellow. It appears to me that he remains in power by making a promise to appeal to his voters, follows through on said promise, and uses the popularity gain from keeping up his end of the bargain to gain more support from the voters before repeating the process. This- while enabling him to keep an iron grasp on his high position- benefits the nation as well, like a symbiotic relationship. While I do view Renkin as power-hungry, I do not believe that he is a tyrant, despite what his critics may or may not think. Renkin's policies are also rather striking, as- apparently- he seeks to uphold both tradition and the economy- a bold move from Renkin that further proves my point of him wishing to appeal to as many people as possible, enabling him to stay in power for as long as possible through legitimate means. He also values individual rights but wishes for people to respect authority- an interesting combination, as while it is a noble goal, I do believe that one would be hard-pressed to increase one without decreasing the other. Overall, he is a most interesting man, in my opinion. We shall see, I do believe, what becomes of him and his nation under his rule."

Paramount Leader

"It should not come as a surprise that I am not especially fond of monarchs and monarchism. Even bourgeois intellectuals understand full well that placing political authority into the hands of a hereditary ruler is not a recipe for societal stability and prosperity. Subsequently, I am not inclined to view Mr. Elmspirit particularly favourably. He may have acted as a reformer, but his activities ultimately serve only to reinforce his regime and its established order. Ultimately, he seeks to perpetuate his own monarchist system, as indicated by his hostility towards revolutionary forces abroad."

"His political views paint an interesting picture, particularly his apparent support for 'free-market socialism'. A contradiction in terms if ever there was one! While there isn't any information regarding what this entails in his mind, I would conjecture that this is another form of the free producer economy so beloved of the petit-bourgeoisie, a useful class element to a monarch threatened by both the proletariat and his own bourgeoisie much as Napoleon III made use of the peasantry. However, Mr. Elmspirit should be aware that this state of affairs cannot last forever. He may be able to slow the wheel of history, buying him and his monarchist ilk a little extra time, but the wheel turns onward nonetheless. His days are numbered."

The de jure leader of this nation, stripped of power, his opinion and descriptions of subjects take dominance over all. Since the establishment of the Spib Republic, his sovereignty has been threatened and has been degraded to a mere constitutional monarch within a constitutional monarchy. He oversaw all events in Spibean history, and was untouched throughout all wars, conflicts, revolutions, and invasions, and yet he is but an idol of the nation. One day his power will return, but the time will not be soon. He finds that your leadership is quite splendid and powerful, and they both share the mindset of autocracy and maintaining their power.

"I, The Heart of The Imperial Palace, offer my opinion of Emperor Jayanagara VII of Majapahit, Hmmm, The Emperor clearly values his nation's strength and security; a strong military is key to these things and the Emperor certainly has worked to create that. This Heart admits that she knows little of environmentalism, so I can offer little opinion on his initiatives in that field. I will say that Jayanagara seems a bit heavy handed in his desire to control information in his country, suppressing those things and people who dissent to him. Such things can go badly if they are done carefully. Though, he has managed to maintain the love of his people and remain connected to them, and this may enough to protect from such negative consequences.

Overall, I will say that Jayanagara has great potential as a ruler. We will keep our eyes on him to see how he develops."

She isn't all too interesting aside from the fact she worked her way from a consort to the empress, I think that's something that sets her apart from others. She doesn't have much else going for her in my eyes. She is also on the older side of rule and I would expect her to have a great deal of experience compared to others.

High Princess Reissechi Yuri excerpt from "Letter to Comrade Rikka Shiyara"

"In accord with the principles of historical materialism, a superstructure that was inherited from an old mode of production can carry over to a newer mode of production, even if its form and substance would always gravitate upon the new mode of production it adapted to.

Caleshan Valkyries is an example of this. Unrefined bourgeois analyses have cast this as an all-tribal society, but in reality it is a capitalist state albeit built on the trappings of tribalism and tribes. The nation is built up of a diversity of tribes, such as Hawkeye Tribe, specializing in R&D and engineering, Wavecrasher Tribe in shipbuilding, Starwalker Clan in rocketry and orbital facilities. This is similar to the Saudi King. The King of Saudi Arabia is in form a feudal monarch, but in substance a capitalist bourgeoisie, the Tribes of Caleshan Valkyrie are in form tribes, but in substance bourgeoisie capitalists similar to the corporations of capitalist countries.

And here we see their faces and names of the ruling bourgeoisie of Caleshan Valkyries - The Tribal Cala, and the substance behind the form of the superstructure becomes more explicit here, for the Tribal Cala, being more than traditional tribal chieftains are scientists, engineers (bourgeoisie technocrats), capitalists and underground bourgeoisie. This people would feel more at home perhaps, if you put them in the front of Wall Street, or the shareholders meeting of Lockheed Martin or Pfizer, rather than in the backdrop of an old village of Maasai elders or San bushmen.

Cala Windham Hawkeye for example is an electrical engineer and describes his job as a "little more than a glorified HR manager", which exposes his capitalist thinking! Cala Granes Wavecrasher is a shipbuilder, mechanical engineer, and an open "businessman" by profession. Cala Victus Starwalker is a computer scientist, astronaut, computer programmer.

We can name more folk here but it is clear that these are tribes in the era of capitalism as much as the King of Saudi Arabia, in the era of capitalism as a monarch is a capitalist bourgeoisie...

“What I’ve read on communism makes me wonder why you’re so focused on spreading it. It looks good on paper, maybe, but it can’t work in the real world. From each according to their ability, to each according to their need? If one man works extra hard and produces twice as much as the man next to him, this system would still give both the same allotment. It may be equal, but it is not fair. There’s no room for ambition! No room for excellence! It treats everyone the same, so what motivates them to do better? What motivates innovation? I see only a few things that could: war, and a whip.

“You’re quick to advocate for your system, but we are fine with our own. From each according to their ability, to each according to their contribution. The one who does more to help their fellow tribesman, the better the amenities they are afforded. You can do the bare minimum, and get the bare minimum. But we want greatness, wherever it can be found. Greatness should be rewarded.

“i don’t understand your magic and physical... peculiarities, but I think I understand you. I also understand that your path is not our path. It is too weak. There is no room among our kind for weakness. You might get along better with Cala Hawkeye or Cala Starwalker, but they’d likely tell you the same.” -Cala Vermuth Iron Tiger

Paramount Leader
Zhao Xuefeng

"I must say that the sociopolitical structure of the Caleshan is unusual to me. It is not often that I encounter modern societies based around tribal principles. However, this Iran Tiger is someone I understand. In some ways he is akin to us in his pursuit of self-improvement, which I understand to be a value that we share with the Caleshan. However, he remains limited by socioeconomic factors that his background in engineering and warfare could not have prepared him for. He and his people are bound to warfare, enslaved by it, and thus they are prevented from truly exceeding. His declared support for militarism and colonialism makes this quite clear; he, the Iran Tigers, and indeed the Caleshan as a whole, are still entrapped within capitalism."

"The only way out is communism. Far from being 'weak', the socialisation of production and distribution enhances social strength and cohesion. People contribute what they can, and everyone receives what they in turn need to prosper, to become the best versions of themselves and thus able to contribute yet more. Communism allows excellence to thrive for its own sake, not enslaved to external forces that bind and shape desires and growth. The Caleshan are an unusual society that developed under unusual circumstances, but their peculiarity does not render them exempt from historical-material processes. Iran Tiger, and all his fellow Cala, are doomed in the long run. Their society will either escape the prison of capital, or it will be destroyed."

"Your words ring hollow, just like your philosophy. 'Excellence for its own sake' is fundamentally self-destructive in your system, as there is nothing to gain from it. Without incentive, excellence is discarded in favor of conformity. This is anathema to us. Humans are creatures of self-interest, and there will always be disparity. If you lose your self-interest, you've lost your humanity. We don't want to do away with our self-interest. We channel it towards more productive ends. We will go ever forward. We will go ever higher. Do not try to halt our progress.” -Cala Vermuth Iron Tiger

Godulan Puppet #2, RPing as technologically advanced tribal society founded by mongols and vikings (and later with multiple other Asian and Native American cultures) motivated by an intrinsic devotion to the spirit of competition. They'll walk softly, talk softly, and make soothing noises as they stab you in the back and take your stuff... unless you're another Caleshan, whereupon they'll only stab you in the back figuratively!

Used NS stats: Population. That's it. Anything else not stated in the factbooks is not used.

"Alas, yet another fool. Now, I must come face-to-face with this...whatever this is. I hesitate to call people of such nature men, because they are most definitely not the children of God! They have been corrupted by the words of Marx and Lenin, both traitors of their fatherland and whose words destroyed many a proud nation! And now, I, the Vozhd of a state once ravaged by their ideology, must speak of their leaders.

I am all for giving people second chances; but what happens when their ideology only gives the people a single chance before tossing them into the wastebin? What type of shameless creature is foolish enough to follow such an ideology? No matter, this "Paramount Leader", Zhao Xuefeng, is nothing. A spec of irrelevance who will die like his predecessors. And when his hermit kingdom dissipates, and democracy, or monarchy, comes to power, I hope he will be seen for what he really was. A pathetic, old fool. Worth not even the slightest of attention."

"A fellow anti-communist and former military man, I feel like I share many commonalities with Mr Ryurikov in terms of personal background. However, his regime reminds me more of General Franco's in Spain many decades ago instead of my own; being nominally a monarchy but without a monarch, Imperial Russia is also an empire without a proper emperor to reign over it. Though I do hope Mr Ryurikov's government already has plans in motion to nominate and coronate a Tsar of their own soon... from an actual noble background of course. I'm also quite astonished at how he's able to maintain control over a territory as vast as Russia's, I couldn't even begin to imagine the logistical nightmares he must face in his duties."
