Oh hello there, you seem awfully familiar, perhaps I saw you when I was having that godforsaken retreat with my brother before he fired me. I would have hired a mercenary and had that bastard be gunned down in the streets but that's passed me now, we had our differences, and perhaps that was the only way we could resolve and be brothers again. Nevertheless! Skyhooked is a beautiful country, great beaches, great food, wine, and teas, and especially great people. If I had the time, I would be there on all the time but....sadly, I have a banking enterprise to run, and the state watching my back with a bayonet blade piercing into it. Best get to hard or end up at the labs, Rapture doesn't have time for lazy or the unemployed, work! work! We must! Be the Bee! No breaks! Get those papers! Get those loans! Make income and repeat! Haha! Life is great. Well, as for my opinion, Shawn Bjarnson is a happy fulfilled man, enjoying the best of life, while poor fools like are stuck behind a mountain of all sorts of documents. No rest for the wicked but that's just being an Aquarian. My overall assessment is a slight positive, the "slight" is due to our current political atmosphere.

"Oh, what is this? Some corporate wolf from Rapture...well it's better than being some garbage hedonist I guess. Of course, bankers are essential in maintaining a balance in a system of capitalism, so I suppose he is no different from all bankers. However, he is a Vonstein, a name I greatly detest next to someone who will not be mentioned in this household, and an inhabitant of Rapture, a place I consider a cesspool of villainy and all things considered disorderly. Since he seems to have great benefits from his government, that alone is enough to convince me he's another petty puppet for Mercer to play with."

"It is... interesting to note that quite a few of those who know me, or perhaps merely think they do, would expect me to praise this woman. And yet, while she certainly displays outwardly strength... her feats are rendered far less impressive to one who has taken the time to consider them in-depth. All she has achieved was through the work of others. Others whom she has intimidated, bullied and cajoled into doing her bidding... and what fools they must be, for she threatens with an empty hand. And the work itself amounts to... what? Precisely nothing. Her empire expands. Her coffers grow... and are depleted almost as quickly by the frantic attempts to keep together the wreckage of a nation her rampant overindulgence has wrought. If you seek new territory, at least learn how to manage it. Physically unimpressive, mentally perhaps even less so, she is consistently outwitted by a lone murderer. She, who claims to control the greatest empire her world has ever known, has no way of dealing with a singular citizen. That aside, her rule is idiotic by its very nature - those who seek power not out of a desire for the improvement of the self or the many, but merely to flaunt it, show it off to sycophants, are among the most rancid dregs of humanity. In short, I find this overgrown child to be... disappointing."

"Well, I hate liberal autocrats, and this vampire is one of them. His reign and realm reminds me a lot of Ragnar's. That viking pirate motherfucker. Just like with him, I hate the whole 'might makes right' ideology that drives his rule. Well, not in political power, but rather in actual strength. I'm literally a god!

Reality is that even the weakest in our society have the potential to be great, and letting the strong win out ultimately leads to that potential being wiped away. In this pale vampire's utopia, I would've been extinguished and America never would've been great again.

Even then, my nation is far more powerful than his medieval ass. Even against opponents of much more advanced technology using his methods of social organization, the RCAS prevailed. His ideology is a dead end through the same tests he values so much.

Then again, his opponents are steppe nomads, so I can't really judge him. He's more progressive than his contemporaries and I guess that's a bonus in his favor. However, that progress must be guided by republican virtues lest you end up with a tyranny of despots and merchants.

Oh, what a small breasted man in a dress. His life is a hectic one, and perhaps could be a normal childhood with the bullies, and not bullies like in Rapture, who are gang landers and have a bathroom painted in red after jumping on a key figure in a rival gang who foolishly forgot to have an escort or a security bot with him to prevent his timely demise, and bringing his gang closer to failure and ended up at the Laboratories for failing to climb the ladder that our loving! Chancellor has made for us. Otherwise, Pickett is quite the genius, when it comes to computers and look at this! He built his very robot army and purge the wasteland of savages all while looking absolutely fabulous! God, it would have been cool to have someone like this in Rapture. Someone who doesn't have a stick up his ass, and was just chill, you know? I could care less about his stances on Banksters like myself or his syndicalism. I would insist on investing on this guy, or just want to have a cigar with him and talk about life and shit. Overall, I like Pickett, and I wish him the best of luck in making America Great Again!

Let's see, who this man is... A servant to the "God-Eater"? "Disciples of the light"? Annihilate every living thing and plunge it into darkness? And just when I thought, that Wendigo and Tom were edgelords, he appears. At least his bio is compact, and not full in details which nobody reads - I will give him that.

There are two options - your first kingdom was brought down either by a long lost kingdom, or by your own boss daddy, who was having an anger spree. I hope, that first variant is correct, as second would have been helluva humiliating for both of you - slept eons because someone got mad, haha!

Now, he was brought back due of humans being humans, and can continue his edgy crusade. Overall, their Earth is even more screwed up than ours, as no matter who will triumph, it will still lose. It is almost like a car crash - terrifying to watch, yet also fascinating... For some reason, you can't turn away.

As a supporter of pragmatic authoritarianism, I am sure, that he has some weird extremist opinions as well - seems a common combo for edgelords. Is there even a question? Overall - negative.

God, I sometimes regret going into this career, should've probably used my skills to be a librarian less stressful and you actually can get breaks but enough with me complaining. This Zhou fellow, man, what a life huh? Bam into the chaotic nightmare that is state bureaucracy and being a literal soldier too. I can't imagine that kind of life. I guess, the only thing similar to it, is when I was in school, bloody times, but not really as intense when you are exposed to a live battlefield and not in a crowd fearing that you might get stabbed by a gang leader's goons. Also, it is quite surprising to see a monarchist get sparred by those Silver ideologues, very much so. I guess, judging that Zhou didn't get killed was good in the end, his leadership can be considered benevolent and reasonable as he ain't no Mercer that's for sure. Overall my assessment is neutral. "It speaks of tropes, and yet the whole "needlessly evil being seeking to resurrect/free/empower its dark master to unleash a new age of suffering" is... not as old as time itself, actually - these eldritch hucksters give themselves far too much credit in that regard. As for the creature itself... well. I am rather interested in seeing what exactly it means by "all creation", because that's a very broad term. If its scope is limited to the world it inhabits, then fair enough. I can see it potentially ushering in some form of apocalypse alongside its nebulous "master". Once they try to reach past that, however, things get a lot more questionable. I'm not entirely sure how they intend to impose anything on the Void, and reaching into multiversal matters is sure to attract the attention of quite a number of things that these two would likely be better off not disturbing. That's probably the largest logical failing these self-proclaimed dark gods undergo, really. The assumption that they are, by default, the biggest fish in the pond. By the very bylaws of narrative causality, this is never truly the case. So really, I'm indifferent at present. If they stay confined to their own world, I've no reason to concern myself with them - unless, of course, there is monetary compensation. It's been a while since we've had to take down an empire. And if they try to reach out and play with the big boys... their annihilation will be an amusing spectacle."

"Because appearing as some scruffy hermit with a backstory of a great, world-renowned adventurer; a person with great aversion from his daily duties as a bureaucrat; a snake in the grass who employs cheap tactics through blackmail and assassination to achieve his artifacts is a person whom everyone should give high praise for, because he's just so nice all of a sudden! Any people who perceive this man to be a good-to-honest person are stupid people, without a shadow of a doubt, and, to mention, yet again, his methods to kill others in search of the artifacts he is also after; this "great" adventurer is more of a vile and venomous snake, a man without a shred of honour, ready to strike his vile fangs out at his rival adventurers. Suffice to say, it is likely one will reconsider their views towards this slimy vermin and his atrocities against his rivals."

"Naricssus is a man of focus, commitment, and sheer will.... He's also an asshole. He's an egomaniac whose thrown morals out the window in order to advance his nation forcefully throw blood and iron. I may seem like a hypocrite for bringing this up since I too have a rather large ego, reject traditional morality, partake in numerous questionable activities, and regularly bathe in blood.... But while Narcissus desires BORING conformity whilst / on the other hand desire FUN individuality! To be completely honest, Narcissus needs to lighten up a bit I mean come on! He's such a buzzkill!" - Chancellor Conrad Tepes

“ Ah! What a entertaining do nothing type of guy, well, that sounded like a bunch of contradictions but otherwise, yeah, he seems like fun guy. I would like to hang out with him sometime and maybe get to know the art of killing demons. However, it seems that is extremely unlikely and without the Chancellor getting his goons on me for supposedly “cooperating with the enemy” given how bad our relations got, and there’s the rumors a massive army is being assembled in some unknown sector of space so that could only mean stuff is about to go down perhaps? Hopefully not. I would like to avoid the paperwork, war and banking are no fun, tiresome and waste my time. I could be at a banquet or nice cigar bar speaking with my fellow elites. But that’s just consequences of getting this job and living in Rapture with a leader who’s temper is no different from a Star going supernova. Over all, like before. Tepes seems like cool guy and I wish him luc - I mean, bad luck if anything happens. Hehe.

Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...
- Not an 1-1 exact replica of Bioshock lore and Rapture City. Only the city's atmosphere and setting is maintained.

Arielle Lindall Leslie Vitesse Allison: Ahh, the wondrous people from The Rapture Republic! Well.. maybe wondrous with the air quotes, as one might say. I am honestly not sure what you are supposed to be, or who you are intending yourself. Fate knows that you are up to something that is not good in the slightest! All about earning money, all about getting ahead of the curve, all about... everything selfish. Is pursuit of money the only thing in your narrow-minded heads? I can't believe you people choosing all this over advancement for everyone as a whole, and just to make people's lives better! Sure, there is scientific advancement, I will give it that, but it is still pretty damn empty if all that you care about is making a profit over everything else. I won't say that all of you behave like that, but one thing is for sure, that you have all the money in the world, but you are all emotionally and morally bankrupt to the point of no return. Maybe it is time to hit the Reset button...

Maybe not.

Answers beyond your wildest imagination? Contact your local Deity to talk to the Fate herself. Or give Fate a phone call. She has a phone too, yknow?
