Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...

"My, what a dullard! By which I would simultaneously like to indicate two things - that he is in fact both uninteresting and lacking in intelligence. What a cumbersome language this is. In any case, I see practically nothing positive to comment on in this man. He seems to have ceased mental development in late childhood, which in itself looks to have been stunted by religious indoctrination of some sort. He decrees conflict not on his own whim, but on the whim of some nebulous "higher power" - if anything, that makes it worse. He could do no worse were he to govern by the teachings of a childrens' animated show - if anything, it would bear more validity than the "holy" scripture he so fervently follows, because at the very least such shows often have some ingrained, if primitive, educational meaning."

If I am to assess him as a being rather than a subject of study, I suppose my biggest gripe would be his obsession with what he calls "justice". I have seen many, many societies run themselves into walls, hinging on nothing but that ephemeral decree of dispensing justice. It tends to mean something slightly different for practically everyone, but is ultimately, nigh-universally, mere subjective folly. There is no tangible thing, no object in this omniverse that one may term "justice". Were Arcanum to realize this, I feel as though his disposition would be a far more rational one."

Regarding Saint Lima

"A wandering, self-proclaimed "saint" of unclear intent and uncertain existential quotient. I have to say, I never did suspect the Stanieran leadership to be under the influence of some pernatural being or series thereof. While exact investigations into the matter would best be left out of such a publicly-disseminated communique, my personal opinion of this... creature is a less than positive one. Man exists as his own being, an architect of his own fate. To have that be interrupted by some man-child playing god, lording over those he views as below himself out of some petty sense of spite... well. Such things carry with them a risk. For there are always those willing to strike down even gods. He would do well to remember that.

Regarding James V

Ah, a successor to the throne of Christenmark. He seems to have carried through his father's rather misguided belief in what constitutes the betterment of one's people. While a ruler ready to serve those he rules over, and not vice versa, is certainly something I can respect, the impartment of religious doggerel is not service. Neither is the maintenance of a moronic, outmoded system of rule that gives rise to kleptocrats and powermad fools by its very nature. This is not to say that I see no good in James - certainly, his relaxation of religious laws and extensive modernization programmes are worthy of some credit. But such traits alone are not enough to shift my thoughts into the realm of the positive - at the end of the day, he remains a misguided relic, in the service of a system best relegated to the annals of history.

If he was one of us, he'd be half way to Council membership by now, I do like this man, and his comedian skill is also awesome. Maybe he could teach me some of his jokes?" -Shawn Bjornson

"Rasputin, one of my favorite dudes. I don't care if he is elected or not, cuz he does actually care for his fellow men, for the people of Yegla. In his eyes, people deserve to be free to make life decisions for themselves and have good education, that empowers them and equips to do their work better and think bigger, so they can see the issue and solve it. Oh, and he does help to secularize his country and make it an advanced power. His values align with our's so much, that I sometimes wonder if he is the Isot brother of First Leader Seth?

I've met him in person during my visit to Nouveau Quebec, in theater... I hope to meet him again, perhaps we will have more time to talk and discuss various matters. Oh, and I've heard, he discovered magic anomalies. Well, in good ol' Skyhooked, we too have mages, since the expedition to Tamriel, however those are only some performers, very rare random people, who toured in Tamriel and several experimental squads. Perhaps we could exchange our discoveries in that field.

My overall opinion on this ally, with whom we sealed the alliance with blood of our common enemies, is highly positive." -Shawn Bjornson

He does everything a good emperor should and should the Imperium ever come to his world and assimilate it he would be offered a position as governor should he come to his senses and support us. One day soon he shall realise that we are the future and happily fall into line as all should. We only hope that Hendrik realises this sooner rather than later."
