What’s the point at this rate? Just take over operations yourselves and remove that extra needless layer of red tape. Everything operates based on your ‘good will’, it seems. Premier Fukushima Sonoko

"A democratically elected 'countess' Careful, Countess von Carstein; I think half the world's leaders will be jealous of your title! Now, let's see. There's no shortage of information, so I'll try to keep from letting my thoughts get out of hand. One thing I want to say is kudos to your pacifism, but I hope you don't still feel any shame about it. In my view, there's no shame in choosing peace over war, even when it's difficult.

"Next, I'm happy to see you've moved beyond being a 'blasphemer.' Believe me, I share your skepticism—I'm not religious myself—but a talk show where you ridicule others' faith traditions is a little much! Even wanting to 'enlighten worshippers' is not the right attitude to have, I think. There's a phrase for this—'settler secularism,' though it's not actually limited to secularism. It's the idea of 'putting religion in its place' in ways that harm cultures deemed outsiders—and that's something both the religious and irreligious can do, from the ancient Roman empire to early modern Christian settlers. To avoid that, I try to act like a guest when it comes to other faiths. I've never practiced Mahouzuhou, or Islam, or all manner of other faiths. Rather than think about 'enlightening' other people—because, do I really know what their faith means to them the way they do?—I look for mutual respect and understanding.

"But that's just how I think about things! And in this same spirit, I should acknowledge that I don't know all the details of your Lahmian and Bloodshadian context that might motivate your approach.

"All that said, it looks like in practice we're actually in agreement in a lot of ways. I may not believe the doctrines of Baizou's many faiths, but like you I believe it's possible to still be on 'cordial terms' and to enact policy that protects their rights as religious people as well as the rights of all individuals. Overall, I wish the best to Countess von Carstein and her presidency. From what I can tell, her innovative policies in regulation, public acquisition of industry, and curbing the rough edges of capitalism have saved Bloodshade from what would have otherwise been a very grim future."

"The world is full of vile and heartless men, spouting lies and shedding crocodile tears wherever they go. Premier Sonoko is a breath of fresh air, someone who differentiates herself from the rest of those people. I wholeheartedly support people such as her for advocating simple yet realistic policies such as improving social welfare and protecting civil liberties, not those people who tout themselves to everyone that they are the spokesperson who is representing their people and state; making bombastic, empty speeches about liberty and freedom. I hate those people. My advice to Premier Sonoko is to never follow those people. Ever."

"You elicit fond memories of what the world used to be like, when the Roman eagle still reigned on Earth as the strongest power that was. Even if this Exarch is not the Basileus of Rome, he is still a firm reminder of a world so close to peak perfection. worth his salt would aspire to be like Lombaricus."

What happens when you cross anime powers and overpowered leaders with furries, all written by a bored Homestuck fan with too much time? Well, you get Rumei. A multiethnic, FT republic with both might and magic that let it conquer the entire Orion Arm.

A 7.6 (this is probably outdated but I can't do the calculations rn) (Tier 9, Level 6, Type 9) according to this index.

Come to The Orion, we got CULTURE and FURRIES

Show Recommendation: Cobra Kai. It is very, very good.

IC Name: Roman Republic, or simply Rome (Rumei). Occasionally called the Ignisian Republic. Current year is 2697.

I got you, mate.

"Ai, you dog, I have returned. Are you ready to fight me yet, without your army at your side? You could win nothing without it, you know. You would die by my blade. It is luck that grants you strength- luck that carried you to victory at Constantinople, luck that won you the Lombards. No victory of yours has been your own; they are all the credit of chance. To wait for an opportunity to strike when victory is already in your grasp is foolish; you must reach out and grasp it to make it yours if you wish your success to last. You grasp the pommel of your blade to guide it, do you not? You do not let it drop by chance and hope that it strikes your foes' helms. You would do wise to learn this, though you being one so short-sighted I would expect such counsel to be discarded without thought. Till next we meet, then, and to counsel ignored. May you be wiser ere we meet next."

or something of the like. If only to see what chaos I would unleash. Well, I appreciate that sort of thing, but... well, I doubt you were serious then, were you? And even if you were I would not trust you to come near me for but a moment. I think you are too desirous of power to consider me really worth your time, really; even then I would not wish to be indebted to one who wishes to hold the role of a god. Perhaps you are wise enough to do so, but I would think it better fitting for one of mortal station to remain there. We are born of earth to die of earth, so say the shamans, and their counsel does not mislead."

It is the opinion of the Great Goddess Who Leads that, when viewed from Her most objective perspective, Akhens-Ari is a most worthy ally and friend of Hamatu. This pronouncement is due to her continued, seemingly unmotivated, friendliness to Her Sublimity, and is in spite of her stubborn refusal to acknowledge Her divinity. Thus, it is advised that a most maternal of attitudes is to be taken by all subjects of The Great Goddess Who Leads in regards to Akhens-Ari and her people, such that they might more warmly feel the glow of Her loving leadership. Finally, it is worth noting that, given the harsh seasonal trends of her lands, Akhens-Ari is likely not eating a properly balanced diet, and may not do so unless properly guided. It is therefore additionally advised that Akhens-Ari be given regular reminders to 'Eat healthily, sleep regularly, and exercise moderately.'

Edited for Charles:

"In regards to that one pranking man, whose name is Charles, and whose father was the most distinguished Fernando:

"It is the opinion of the Great Goddess Who leads that, when viewed from Her most objective perspective, Charles is a most unworthy ally and friend of Hamatu. This pronouncement is due to his continued, seemingly unmotivated, pranks and generally abrasive attitude towards Her Sublimity, and is in spite of his seeming irreconcilable skills in leadership. In addition, it is noted, he has a view of leadership differ much from those of The Great Goddess Who Leads, preferring, it seems, a weak model of pseudo-authoritarianism, wherein he forces his will upon his people while simultaneously rebuking any responsibilities a leader should claim. It is therefore advised that distance and malignment be associated with him and his people, such that they might more fully experience the punishments of poor leaders."

"It's so strange, I only find myself interacting with certain nations in a rather small crowd. I've stopped myself from interacting with leaders but its rather unknown why I pause before confirming my word, or even withdrawing it entirely. The multiverse has changed, the leaders have changed and some I've heard from the fallen souls such great relations, like Oni talking up Rapture while TFK tore them down. This is a rather personal rant on my part, I'm not saying anything towards you, just rather pondering with you, or even speaking idly into the wind.

NOW for why we are all here. Now my divine friend, she's quite known around the multiverse, but odd enough, I was the first contact for her lands and ours. It makes me giddy that when I meet someone I like that I haven't heard stories of.

And while I hate godlike creatures or those that have a god complex, I like her. She has a rather cheerful personality that i can relate to, its weird, I despise the sea but im fine with her and her people. While I don't see her as a warrior, I still consider her as a friend though. Sure I wouldn't spar with her, but I like the shenanigans." -Luden

"As usual, my European companion uses many words to say very little. He has not read his own history, or his own scripture, for if he had he would see that this Junius is in fact a Christian whose new Roman kingdom has brought the Nazarene's faith out of obscurity and into the light. The Caesar's Empire might be no more, but clearly a kingdom remains on the peninsula, one worth defending and upbuilding. Why, Junius even is an example of this so-called 'republican' government—elected to the exarchy by a senate. While I myself do not much like the idea of a king who rules at the whim of his court, instead of the other way around, I am at least pleased to see the Exarch defies Sir Staley's

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitravgrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

All he has to offer are his pagan superstitions and warrior ways—a far cry from the civitas cultivated in Rome, the civic values, the republican government, the philosophical ingenuity, and artistic mastery! This Junius may have given himself a Latin name, but 'Lombaricus' gives away that he is but a barbaric interloper."

"What nonsense is this simpleton talking about? I may be falling into senility, but I am fairly sure I was in correspondence with the Emperor just this week ago, I'd presume that means the Empire is standing. You cry out of our accomplishments, almost as if you claim them yourselves, this is the action of a barbarian, and of a plunderer. I gave myself no name, as a child of the Eternal City, my name was given to me by my father, and I bear the blood of Constantine the Great, while I believe men are more than just the blood of their ancestors, I ask you, who do you descend from to look down upon me?"

Look upon this fool, who lambast me for the name Lombaricus, the name granted to me by the people for my accomplishments in bringing the Lombards to heel, not only through force of arms, but through a hand of friendship; I very much doubt that you have such civility yourself. And on the topic of the name I was granted, I must call your bluff, for you clearly know little of our customs and traditions, is Scipio Africanus from Africa? or Germanicus Germania? I see through your haughty lies barbarian, my temper is short with such insults; Be glad that you are in distant lands, for despite my age, I feel adding the name Stalianus to my person."

"There is a certain chord of sympathy I see in Junius, I shall confess. Junius is king. But he serves at the will of an emperor. I am Baizou-jima's ruler—but the Englishman's king is my 'emperor.' Unfortunately, that is where my similarities with the Exarch end. Junius seems to respect his emperor and to be respected in turn. My feelings toward King Charles are... more mixed."

"I thank you for your kind words, it is good to hear from a wise man such as yourself. I Wish that one day you may free yourself of the barbarian usurper, and free your country from their yoke. May your name be cheered a thousand years, and remember, a king is more than just a title, and I believe that your civility, politeness, and intelligence is the mark of a true King, my prayers are with you."

Ahh, that aside, I always have a likeness for you as a friend. You are a great mathematician and a computer scientist, and of course, a wonderful friend not just to me but to the other Valentians around me. All right, I am just repeating myself at the moment, now, a few things I would definitely love to talk about! You certainly are a rather small one, and that is not a bad thing, of course! I know this is easier said than done, but I have a feeling that you might just need to stop smoking altogether. I can only guess and tell that it is not doing good things to you. Well, easier said than done, but with me around, I can make that problem go away just in a snap! Though of course, I should not force a fate on someone; only when they really want it. We should also totally look at an assortment of dresses we have over the years, haha! I know I have a lot of them because of... you know, because of what I do! We should try matching dresses, while you sit on my palm. That would look pretty adorable, hm! Have a great day to you, Love.

"Oh Charles, we have never seen anyone squander such an amazing opportunity to take a nation in the right direction. Giving your people these so called rights will only open your nation to cultural and mental degradation. Your people will be lead astray by corporations and bad actors while keeping them divided with their factions and petty squabbles. The business leaders will throw all sorts of garbage in front of your people in order to keep them distracted from the strangulation of their nation by the powers that were meant to prevent such a thing.

Despite these failings we see the spark of competence in you. If you were to truly become a 'benevolent dictator' you could dissolve that silly parliament you founded and start taking the steps you need to take in order to create a state that will protect your people. For now our opinion is negative, but the file we see shows us that you could become much more than what you are now. Think about what it is we say Charles, it may just be the wisdom that you need to take Svenska-Britannia to a better place."

"Kamile is a strange character in my eyes as an Aterian and a human. She possesses features seen on a human's but there are other things that make her visibly different e.g. the horns on her head. She is someone not from this world but in another. But my assertion on Kamile should not be focused on her appearance alone, rather, it should be on the principles she follows and her constitution. Her ideals are noble and high-minded, they are plain, simple yet sincere. She has fulfilled the things she said and the policies she wants administered in Remulia: improving the quality of life and expanding civil liberties. Like Premier Sonoko, she is deserving of my respect for committing herself to the betterment of her civilization."
