It's all fun and games until some military guy somehow started playing NS and also started leaking mil documents just to get ahead.

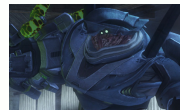

Ah yes, let's reenact War Thunder please. I do love leaking official secrets and ruining my job as well.

Ruining your career, AND some jail time.

I still couldn't believe that happened. I mean, it does read like an Onion article, but goes to show.. real life is putting satire sites out of business.

I would love to be a fly on the wall as The Onion realized their content would have to get more outlandish in comparison to their past content.

how do the people with like thousand kilometer long ships get around those things so many nations have these super long ships but never actually explain how bob the mechanic gets from the engines to the forward

guns or whatever

mostly guns

90% of those ships are guns and how come no one has applied power wanking on that scale to PT nations like instead of magic fireballs you pull out a trebuchet the size of a small skyscraper or galleon with 1,000 cannons

The engineers simply live and die in the dark pit of the engine, with a separate group doing the same in the forward guns.

I'd laugh in torpedoes, only to realize that they are so large the sheer cost offset by a sufficient number of torps (and to some limited extent ASHMs... Actually, sod it, may as well be ballistic missiles, why NOT?!) still would make it a very expensive affair... With the net loss going to the one attacking the behemoth, not the one who built it.

Well, unless you manage to somehow kill it through a small meteor, in spite of the painful logistics and costs, then I guess the one yeeting the behemoth with a ROCK from SPACE would be the one winning the money game.

I swear one day I'll crack at another war RP, just to see it crumble as people fail to reach a conclusion as their megalith boom boats the size of small islands get beached far from the theatre while their singular mega tank gets ripped up by drones and infantry with demolition charges... Basically turning it into a sitting duck.

All the while the sky's set on fire as everyone and their mother gets a free potshot at the lumbering mega bomber with every SAM site in the area and in some far-off foreign countries all laser it down with a crippling amount of missiles.

I mean, at that size you won't even need to do that. I think a boarding operation is the most prudent solution.

All you can do to avoid embarrassment on this site, military-wise, is not talk about your military. It's either have everyone know your about as well versed on how a modern(in most cases a modern military on this site is fucked sideways to fit the user's desires) military actually functions as well as you'd expect from a kid who's only military education consists of HOI4, Reddit, and badly constructed sites from Albania, or you can keep quiet about the matter. That's how I view the matter, though.

Political intrigue is possible with MT or PMT nations, but in all cases, it varies on how the user executes it. However, most nations who reside in MT or PMT don't really care about that(shocker, ain't it), which is honestly a shame.

Understandable viewpoint, and as is the case with most issues, more experience comes with it more knowledge. In the short term, not much can be said here that's really going to make an impact on what a user knows, but in the long term, there's a hell of a lot of information that can be dispersed to help guide conversations back towards reality a little. Or not, if that's someone's cup of tea. Personally, I'm fully aware that some aspects of my creations aren't correct, but more often than not, it's the parts that I think are accurate that are often the least.
