Claudia's Mood: Unamused

"If it isn't another sad, middle aged man haplessly dressing like a sixteen-year-old neckbeard in a desperate attempt to disguise the emasculated shadow of his former self. I mean, I get that the male-menopause can be a real bitch, but stuffing that little muffin top into a chain mail girdle isn't fooling anyone; not anyone but you and your own fragile sense of self respect that is. (Smirks amusingly) I have an idea, why don't you ask your wife's boyfriend to lend you some of his clothes?! (Giggles sarcastically) Awe, touchy subject? Must be hard feeling like the third wheel every time she makes you sleep in the guest room. Look on the bright side though, at least your kids have an actual father figure in their lives, or at the very least, one that isn't you. Oh, and eighteen years on the throne? Wowwww, congratulations! How does it feel to be a glorified warm body? (Laughs dumbfoundedly) I'm not even joking, how the f*ck has a useless douchewad like you stayed in office this long? Maybe if you spent more time looking like a leader and less like some dirty q-tip in a second-hand Party City costume, the public might actually know who the hell you even are. Peacekeeper? Yeah right, more like housekeeper."

"I must say that what I am seeing about Manager Claudia is very unflattering. From what I can tell, she is unrepentantly corrupt and tyrannical in her ruling style. The fact that she destroyed her family's business seeming for no reason and felt no remorse over it is very sad as well; speaking as someone whose parents were....not the best people, I cannot excuse such cruelty when her family seems to have been nothing but supporting towards her. Her only redeeming quality appears to be her status as an effective administrator and even that is tarnished by the fact she apparently does as much harm to her employees as good. My advice would be for her to take a long hard look at herself and try to change into a better person"

"A young monarch... truly, I've never heard the folly of something like that before. Well, anyway, despite the age of this young empress, it already seems that Nunnally had laid the groundwork of managing a large demesne in a fair-handed manner. Even so, it is the downfall of any leader, monarch or otherwise, to think of their ruling philosophies in pure pleasantries and idealisms. All the wars that her realm had went through should already enforce such a notion; with that in mind, pursuing egalitarianism and peace for the sake of egalitarianism and peace will ultimately lead to nowhere. It would be in her best interest to find a true, solid vindication for her future ruling philosophy, lest she be manipulated by her lessers out of a weakened heart. Now, on to the next dossier..."

Menschlicher

interesting person,
to say the least.
Let me make myself perfectly clear here before I continue- I do not support him. I do not believe he is a good person. With that out of the way,
from what I can tell
about his official biography, he is not evil, per se.
Rather, it is the generations of misguidance and indoctrination from

President Lyra Elmspirit

his people that put him in such a state. Other than his limited views and indoctrinated ways, he is an effective leader, and one that I might rally behind if he wasn't so blind to the truth about the species of the universe. I'm almost half tempted to stage a fake assassination attempt (in which he will truly be in no danger) on him and 'save his life' in order to show him that not all non-humans are evil. But I wouldn't really do that. I'm just not that kind of person. Although, I do know people like that.
Honestly, as long he doesn't do anything morally wrong (or refuse to stop anything that is such) in order to promote or enforce his views, I see nothing wrong with him staying in power right where he is- far out of reach from Mirum and any other nation outside his current territory. With that being said, I care not what happens to him, and merely wish that he just comes to his senses and does the right thing."

-President Lyra Elmspirit

TL;DR:

President Elmspirit is not 100% pleased with the Stemenkaiser of Menschlicher Stemenstaat.

Well done on the character bios and everything else, really. I will be reading more from your wiki soonish.

Inogo Esteim: I sort of disagree with you when it comes to drug criminalization. I think both of us can agree that drugs aren't a good idea but criminalizing them isn't solving the problem. It's going to make it worse, just ask the United Federation or the United States. It's actually much better if you open up the drug laws with strict regulations and government oversight along with brainwashing the population with anti-drug propaganda.

Solving poverty and school bullying has also proven to reduce drug use. But considering your nation doesn't seem to fall apart from that, maybe your policy is working. Only time will tell. Also who the fuck am I to judge on this issue, i am on drugs, riding a galloping and bucking shudak, standing on the roof of a moving train, and driving 200km/h are all highly addictive drugs.

Speaking of which I really want to know you more, like our interests seem to overlap. You like hiking and archery, destroying government corruption with violent means, and you have a realistic, pragmatic view of the world. I really can see a relationship... platonic one of course, I am not interested in romance going on between the two of us. You can teach me how to use a bow and your arcane abilities and we can blow up targets from a distance. I can teach you how to ride and we can go on trail rides together, i'm sure Daikan would be happy to carry you considering how light you are. id be brilliant. Plus instead of using boring whoopie cushions, you can use pufferfishes... Ok that might be taking it a bit far. Oh dear. Oh yeah I can teach you how to drive a tank and you can freely drive armored vehicles in Sherechia.

Apart from my mild criticism of your drug policy, I don't actually have anything bad to say about you. I mean the radical communists are screaming at me to denounce your capitalist-socialist system but fuck them. You're a tolerant, sensible man, unbound by doctrine and ideology with a realistic worldview and just having an overall goal of incremental improvements instead of reckless progress.

"President Elmspirit... Certainly somewhat unique amongst the other notable figures I've encountered so far. I mean, she's 111! I don't think I've ever met someone that old, let alone seen them wielding political power. Then again, I understand that she isn't human, so perhaps this is normal for her physiology. For such a long life, she doesn't seem to have done all that much, entering high office only recently. I see that she served within the military, fighting within a civil war before getting into politics. Certainly took her a while to get anywhere with that, but if everyone lives that long I imagine politics tends to get quite ossified. Even amongst humans, such systems tend to be dominated by the intractable elderly.

Her politics seem little different from the run of the mill social-democrat, really. I must say that I am not entirely sure what 'equality for all' means, beyond serving as a slogan. Equal in what way? As for a so-called mix of capitalism and socialism... Well, consider me skeptical. I imagine that in practice it is little different from the regimes of the social-democrats and corporatists, merely another bourgeois economic model with some degree of state oversight, far removed from anything resembling actual socialism. I am not sure why she differentiates between socialism and communism given that they're synonyms, but perhaps that's something they do differently there. That would explain why they think they can combine socialism and capitalism. I am also not sure how she can square her supposed commitment to 'equality for all' with an opposition to communism. As much as the former strikes me as mere sloganeering, equality is typically associated with the socialist or communist project.

To conclude, I'd say that Elmspirit is little more than a typical idealist bourgeois liberal, perhaps well-meaning but certainly misguided. Lacking in materialist analysis, she doesn't realise that her vision is detached from the realities of everyday life and can never truly be implemented. As much as she scorns the idealists for desiring the impossible, she herself is an idealist of the highest order, in both senses of the word."

~ Director-General Sophie Hawkins

"Well, I've previously talked about Inogo Estima of Sherechia and the problems with his particular ideological stance, so I suppose it would be worth looking at the positions of his chief opposition, a Mr. San Horo. Horo is the head of the Sherechian Red Guards, a socialist political organisation that adheres to the Maoist tendency. While Maoism is flawed in many ways, it is certainly closer to the objectives of socialism than the dominant market system favoured by Estima. Horo strikes me as a particularly driven individual, not unlike myself in some respects, a man who understands the value of correct theory paired with a disciplined mindset.

His skill as an orator reminds me of Aidan Harper, the man who brought about the Second Vesperian Revolution that established the Technate as it exists now. While there is still a fair bit to be desired with Horo's ideological stances, he has a better understanding of such matters than Estima, and can likely be guided towards more correct positions. His observation that Sherechia is backsliding towards capitalism is certainly astute, and perhaps, armed with the proper doctrines, he can be the man that helps drive Sherechia forwards into true socialism."

Anyhow, while I would certainly lack most knowledge in whatever this Social Technocrat thing is, she does certainly prove to be quite a dedicated leader herself, for better or for worse. Now, while her apparent intentions behind her own desire of embracing internationalism are certainly not that peaceful sounding, the idea of internationalism itself does sound ideal overall, especially when we're living in such a modernised age ourselves. And with all that aside, I'd just like to say that the way she embraces education at a rather young age does certainly remind me of myself even, for mummy does love seeing her boys and girls be a normal, but intelligent person like herself!"

Jakub Suchoparski, Premier of the People's Commonwealth

"Młam, młam ó młam. Pagan witchess, have you perhaps charmed me with your Oriental magics?"

Forgive me, Kalasznikówka. A bad habit of mine, I admit. You were an arms creator, yes? For our good friends to the southwest, the People's Republic of China? I understand you must now regret your participation in those projects, though I'd be deeply proud of accomplishments like that if I were in your position. War, though a regrettable and costly endeavour, is the foremost and most excellent way of pursuing political goals for your people. Such a violent spectacle, worthy of all the art that had been dedicated to it.

I understand the Russians aided you, as you, in many ways, have aided them, too. A surprising development, considering many of the historical examples of the Russians being an Id civilisation, full of ravagers and bandits in tailored suits. Though perhaps it was the influence of your own wonderful East Asian culture, droga Zetian.

[...] WP

Ah, I know what this allure must be. Certainly, it's the passion our two pasts, generational and personal, of a Long March through hardship, out towards honour and glory. For I am certain that you, and your compatriots-in-arms, will be victorious against those dreadful Epsilonists. Yes, I'm sure that under your leadership, mon ami, your army will lead to the Brainwashers' downfall."

In a world where the Spartacists won in 1919 and Trotsky achieved his world revolution, Russia's minority dumping ground in the Far East is undergoing an internal revolution. Led by a sly artist-premier and his technocratic posse, surrounded by a salacious secretive Civil Servants' society, factionalist scheming, and (literal) backstabbing.

"Premier Suchoparski, despite heading the 'National Proletarian Camp' is quite removed from anything resembling the proletariat. While I'd rather not get too personal, an examination of his lifestyle clearly shows him to be nothing more than a typical example of the petty-bourgeois intelligentsia, a corrupt 'intellectual' who considers himself life's protagonist. He is deeply unfit to even be remotely affiliated with an organisation that calls itself proletarian, let alone sit at its head. Unfortunately, it seems that the ONP as a whole disgraces the term.

His bourgeois stance extends beyond his personal life, the positions he endorses and the policies he enacts all further signify the capitalist nature of Suchoparski's government. He nationalises industries yet continues to enrich private enterprises, he rewards monopolist corporations and incentivises productivity. What about any of this is remotely socialist?

While I suspect solidarism has a somewhat different meaning from the one I'm used to, it shares a common narrative of 'class collaboration' which, as we've seen so many times before, translates to complete bourgeois domination in practice. The thing about class conflict is that it's an inevitable feature of class society, you can't just declare it to no longer exist any more than you can deny the existence of gravity. And this brings me to his supposed technocracy. I won't deny that he certainly has a few technocratic elements, but one of the insights of Social-Technocracy is that in class society, any technocratic stance will inevitably be employed for the benefit of the ruling class. It would seem that Sybira, that class certainly isn't the proletariat."

Hell, the only thing I'll be pampering myself with is all the tax money that I steal from your people after I give it to mine. And the only thing I truly say that I'm better at is slaughtering "revolutionary" tools like yourself. God willing I'll see you on the battlefield, Hernandez. Oh wait. I almost forgot. You socialist edgelords don't fight your own battles."

Bruh just make a leader factbook or else nobody will fucking know that your character is a 'super powerful god warrior' Mary Sue and just continue to mock you based on what little you've actually managed to write.

Also making petulant /skip replies kinda goes against the point of the thread since if everyone did what you did, it wouldn't be an 'AN' game anymore. You don't need to have the final word whenever your character gets a comment that you don't like.

"I admire their leaders care for their citizens, even if they are Socialist. It would be nice if they would abolish Corporal Punishment. I however, do admire her creativity and admire the hardships she has overcome, it makes great qualities in a leader and proves that the leadership is strong. I find a Social-Technocracy to be intriguing. " - Ohtli

Diaboland: "I admire how chill and lax they are with their laws. She seems like a fun person to hang out and drink with" - Ohtli

Although President Ohtli's policies were more of a socially liberal bent - not what I would have first expected from a Mesoamerican cultural origin, but alas, a new world and its history will do unusual things. Anyway, despite this liberal inclination that the President has, I can safely say that we share a similarity in the preservation of culture and family values between our respective peoples. Ah, this is interesting - we're both fans of cats. However, what in the fuck is a... 'Roblox'?"
