*Goes through 3 albums and rated them because he doesn't find them interesting enough to listen through again, despite rating them a 7*

Gnarls Barkley-Crazy

Don't really care for this Gnarls Barkley album as a whole, either. But this song is good.

Gnarls Barkley-Just a Thought

Another good one.

And I've tried everything but suicide, but it's crossed my mind~

When I was lost I even found myself looking in the guns direction~

I only listen to an album again if it's at least an 8. Stuff that I rate a 7 I'm like, "meh, it was ok but probably won't listen to it again".

ScHoolboy Q – Gangsta

This album being the exception, however. I think I may have given it too low of a rating.

The thing is, lots of these I don't know what my final rating is. Like the album I listened to earlier that started to drag on and on. I knew it kinda bored me after a while before, but it bored me even more this time around, so I rated it even lower.

Those ones I rated a 7 somewhere in my head, but not officially, I remember thinking were cool musically, but kind of boring math rock/progressive rock overall, which is the only reason they got a 7. Went through them real quick to see if I could find any special quality that may fluctuate my opinion, but nope.

7's like my "Good concept, maybe some good songs here and there, but overall not that exciting" rating level. Anything below an 8 is unlikely for me to care about much, with exceptions. I even have some 6's that may have a good song but the rest aren't that great. Like the new Mogwai song. LOVED the single. Was all excited. Single was one of their best ever. One of my favorite songs by them. The rest of the album? Very disappointing. I was excited for the album but was heavily disappointed, so it got a 6...Only thing that would probably make me go back to that album is that one song.

Experimental hip-hop with some rock thrown in here and there...and even a punk song, if I recall. The hip-hop aspect has many, many different influences in it. Hence the "Experimental hip-hop", but experimental doesn't automatically mean a bunch of influences. I even know experimental hip-hop that's just...really weird hip-hop. Experimental rock is like weirder, more complex rock. While avant-garde is whole different story.

Edit: Rateyourmusic calls it mostly trip hop. I guess that works...

With 7s like that (rated a 7 but overall boring), if I don't feel like listening to the whole thing, I'll listen to 30 second samples of the songs to refresh my memory. That usually gives me a decent enough idea of how I want to rate it (assuming I change the rating). ☐

But then there's 7s where it was interesting enough to listen to again, but it didn't meet my expectations the first time; those are relatively easy to listen to again.

Music listening is so complicated sometimes. ☐

That's how I was with the most recent Phantogram album. Absolutely loved Fall In Love, but the rest of the album was really disappointing. Still gave it a 7 because it was a decent album, just boring.

Only because our brains make it so ☐. I used to just listen through music and that was the end. But not so much anymore. Now I kinda like to know HOW much I actually like them. Partly doing this so I actually know what to buy...Hence my wishlist on Rateyourmusic.

Also, what I do, is skip through the song. Play a bit of it, go meh, jump to another part, doesn't get any more interesting, continue, do that to all the songs on the album.

There's a couple of songs I like on that album, but pretty much the same for me.

Blegh, I'm complaining about it being too warm to work outside and it's only 74....I don't do well with this thing called the sun shining on me ☐

Humidity is 56%. I'm guessing that doesn't exactly help any. Sacramento is dry heat and I can talk about it feeling nice when it's like 80 there. Partly because it's 90 for most of the summer, but still...
