None, freedom of speech is sacrosanct here and individuals don't like the state to interfere anyway as long as it's not absolutely necessary.

Female circumcision.

Leftists abuse politics for their narcissistic need for moral superiority. Ironically, they usually achieve the opposite.

As far as the police department is aware, the mafia is just a social club that does a lot of work for good causes. Yes, the chief of police did just get back from two weeks in Barbados. What's your point?

Technically covered by freedom of speech, although the candidate could potentially sue for difamation under the right circumstances, but for the most part it's covered by freedom of speech.

pretty much unenforceable since its too generalized for asians to pirate games, but if charges are pressed it could amount to 100k fine or 15 years of imprisonment, otherwise light fines.

They'd be charged for littering (somewhat ironically considering they're supposedly environmental activists) which (as above) comes with a hefty fine.

We don't have elections but the Scientists, Engineers, and other Professionals do rate government executives. If you faked your identity as some sort of "professional" and have rated government officials, that's a 10-year prison sentence at the very least with 56k fine.

We haven't gone anywhere near as far into using computers as most "modern" nations, yet, so effectively this would only be a minor nuisance rather than a serious threat to public security. You'd probably face a moderate fine, under whatever law is interpreted creatively to cover such cases in the current absence of more specialised legislation, but you would also probably be able to cover most of that with the consultancy fee that you'd be offered to plug the hole in the system through which you did the hacking... and you might even be offered a longer-term job. If you refuse to do the consultancy work, however, part of that fine would probably be taken by confiscating your computer (if you do own one of your own) and you could be banned from computer-use -- with more serious penalties possible for breaking that legal 'Banning Order' -- as well. Hacking into government computers AGAIN would face more severe penalties, under national security legislation, however.

Copyright laws are not fully developed so plagiarism is not currently punished. However, if the original creator wishes they can complain directly to the Queen who will punish as she sees fit, usually this is with a large fine.
