People just being completely unable to read factbooks and immediately judging a nation in full by either their flag or by a ridiculously short skimming of overview content. Say someone is trying to create a nation that is a subversion of a trope/premise done absolutely to death, but anyone who comes across it gives it the vaguest possible read and goes 'Yep, this is literally just another X with absolutely zero elements that set it apart from its counterparts'.

No, I'm not bitter that's happened to me. Shut up.

Nice try, but even if someone were to use Summerposter correctly, you are one of those who would still fall under it.
Your attempts at looking good by attacking bad tropes are rather embarrassing to watch.
Maybe try to improve your writing ability and start a new, non-generic Right-Wing Americawank next time instead of attempting to pretend that what you created has any merit.

Point of order, whatever flaws TAR's worldbuilding and setting might have, he's still... not by any means a summerposter or even a more generic "low effort poster" (which we use with summerposter interchangeably at this point given how the whole site's been in an eternal summer for like 2 years at this stage).

If it looks like a duck, talks like a duck, walks like a duck, and vomits out the same modern-America but it elected my preferred geriatric so it's now an invincible hyperpower and all my country's largest potentially geopolitical rivals are either unflinching and powerful allies, comically stupid, or just dead in the water with barely even decent justification, I am going to treat it accordingly.

No, I left the server because I didn't care terribly for the people there and I wasn't actually on there all that much. I called the entire server communists long before that because the communist humor was relentless ironic or not, and I didn't explode either. At most I got annoyed by a stupid ping.

I feel like it's important for the "effortposter" community to remember their roots. (Full disclosure: I do not consider myself one since I generally stay off F7 anyway, but I run a Discord server with a lot of people who like this board so I know what I'm talking about.) You do have people like Textkentuck, ZN, Free Ravensburg, etc.; the kind of posters where you have to ask yourself "why are these people even here" who make up let's say 50% of the population, and you've got the kind that post three times before getting bored and leaving that's about 20%. In the 30% that's left, you have committed posters like ValZ, Synne, Foehn, Wormfodder, Hyrule, Las Palmeras/TSP, Kiu Ghesik, Batavia, Tsaivao and many others who occupy a beloved niche in the community and are a reliable source of fantastic content. The problem, in my opinion, is that there are some people among us who see that collective 50% as uniformly irredeemable and forever destined to be shit. This is a valid position though only mostly true. I say "mostly true" because occasionally you can find users like Langenia who were accepted by the community, got some mentorship, and got a lot better at RPing. That's what we need to do: find users with potential and help them use it effectively. We were all noobs once, so ask yourself if you'd want to be shit on by a community you genuinely wanted to be a part of.

This is also an important thing to remember. It's just a game, my dudes/dudettes/spiritually dudelike nonbinary entities. We're just here to have fun and share our brainrot with other creative types. Why be such a spoilsport?

So I am a bit sleep-deprived but hey, here's how. ♥

I can absolutely see where Gandoor is coming from, in all fairness. In all honesty, I will admit that I got a bit peeved with your comment, though not because I am defending the site (well, not that fully). It's just that I had a lot of fun with you guys and there are a lot of people I would not have met had it not for here. With that said, I do admit that there are a lot of times (thankfully in the past) where I got annoyed when I didn't get the post I wanted. Over the time? Shrug, live, then let live. Remember that we were, at one point, beginners and newbies.

So here's a fun little fact about me: When I got here the first time, my flag was a variant of Luxembourg with rainbow confetti sprinkled all over it, and it was getting close to just being a nondescript European supernation (a bit like EU).

So... yeah! I personally think it's okay to enjoy each other's company and appreciate the work of one another, but at the same time, remember not to blow a fuse too hard (and it's rich coming from me, I know). Unless you too are kickstarting your own franchise or your own work, to which is another story for another time. Me, I'm just here now for great times and to write as a hobby.

A good chunk of people on this site: OMG they are Stalinist dictatorship/Soviet puppet state/Eastern European communist dictatorship/Maoist China with no freedoms, speaks Russian or Chinese, mandates state atheism, and sends people to gulags or labour camps!!!

Like honestly even in a thread where you're supposed to judge exclusively by the flag or something, at least try and be more creative.

The question is who exactly is gonna spearhead helping out the summies? One good look at the effortposter clique and you already hit an unbreakable wall where no has the time nor patience to teach anyone the ropes and do the condemned even want to in the first place is another question.

Well, I think it is important for those people to just take comments we give them in their stride, you know?
They don't need complete mentoring to improve, that is for sure...
But I will not lie, the drive to be cordial enough to summies that we don't scare them off necessarily is kind of... Not here.
I am guilty for being a bit bashful, but I try to provide something to them if they ask...

It is simple to improve here... Write more stuff in your factbooks and write more stuff on the forums. I think most of the legwork, in that case needs to be done by the person in charge of their own nation themselves, not really us, if you understand where I'm coming from.

Really speaking as someone who has been posting on these forums for over 11 years the real answer is to just stop caring about other people's content so much.

If they're having fun, that's fine. Don't get mad because they're not conforming to some arbitrary 'standards' in posting.

And if you're really bothered by it? Well, use the foes list. It exists and is free.

In retrospect, I might have confused parts of TAR with the slew of other American Template nations.
I'll apologize for that, but that's kinda one of the problems with the generic clones, they'll do blend together and are hard to keep apart unless they do something really special.

Also, if I see someone put more effort into their posts, I am perfectly willing to give credit where it is due.

Difference between mine and most is I actually put effort into my lore and am still trying to develop/improve it. The TAR is a major project that will take months to complete, so, there's a lot to do.
