He is a great king, and, like his predecessor Tradominas, a worthy wearer of the Iron Crown; but he was not yet done, and he will not rest until he stops breathing. But the time is near at hand when he will, and the reason is this, Antimonos is going to war; he is going to claim the throne of Trymia, not for personal glory, but for Thakia itself, and then he will call it a day. I know not what he will do afterwards, but at this moment I would not wish to wait.

What would you have left to stand on? Look, credit where credit is due. If nothing else you aren't an idiot... Quite the opposite if I'm telling the truth. But the fac of the matter is, you are little more than a fresh new face for the old guard - an elite club of right-wing imperialists, certainly entrenched deep enough to withstand the ruthless barrage of young men with the same fundamental beliefs as them.
