"Well, fuck. It has been a while."

QUOTE

Okay, what do we have here? Christophe the II? Well, I don't like monarchs. Wait a second! Carthage? I thought Carthage was some sort of republic. Wait, Carthage WAS destroyed in that timeline? But, the Carthaginians fled en masse? And, they went to Europe? So, this ISNT Carthage of old? Fuck, my brain hurts.

Well, I don't know how to feel about his legalization of same-sex marriage. Ironically, I support it since the RCAS did the same thing in the 2nd American Civil War against the Federals. On the other hand, I'm against him unilaterally using his royal power against a democratically elected parliament to push for something supported by only a minority of the population.

Otherwise, his government exposes all the flaws of liberal monarchism, from the philistine pretentiousness to selective application of democratic principles. Really, he wouldn't be out of place in early 21st century Europe in my timeline."

"In any case... that's a strange little timeline you've got going on. In some ways, I can respect it. We both agree on size being an issue to governance, and honestly, I can even see the case for leftist economics, even if I personally disagree that they solve the issues that they claim to. I've never personally seen left-wing economic policy combined with white nationalism, if you don't count... you know. Point is, something interesting to study. And that's about where the similarities end.

"That white nationalism thing... I'm not exactly for that. Dude's a good... 36 years younger than I am, you'd have thought the twenty-first century would have bred people that were over that by now. I mean, with direct access to any race anywhere in the world in the form of the Internet, you'd imagine that people would see all of these intelligent people of all the other races and think 'yknow, maybe I were wrong'. I dunno.

"Aaaand I just clicked on the entire RCAS article. I'm about to throw up looking at that map. In any case, God am I glad to live in the timeline I do. Christ, you never get a wakeup call as powerful as you do looking into a parallel version of yourself. It's times like these where I wish quantum mechanics didn't allow for the many worlds interpretation. Yeah, it'd mean we all face the 21st Century Oil Crisis, but we wouldn't be living under an imperial racist either."

"Excuse me for a second, but what exactly is this 'internet', and why in Hell's name should a defunct, human-lead corporation, this "Aye Tee and Tee", one of the vile and unspeakable temples humans made to their depraved religion of Capitalism be placed in charge of it? Corporations should not be in charge of anything, for they have proven they will gladly sacrifice whole populations to their vile, human-made gods. For that matter, what is this 'Dial-up Modem'? Is it anything like an Earthnet quantum modem? And what is this 'ManBearPig' you keep going on about?

As for this 'nation'... it is an utter mockery of socialist values, a depravity, an insult to every proletariat made into propaganda. It is not socialist, it is a system designed to funnel every bit of wealth that exists within its system into a new bourgeoisie, the 'leader-bourgeoisie'. But I understand this is the doing of the wretched Kokichi Oma, not you, VP Gore.

In any case, I strongly suggest you get some much needed mental help, VP

*Honestly, I am not sure if to wheeze or facepalm when I saw her referring to capitalism as "religion", same to hearing about some human-made "gods". I perhaps could throw her a massive torah or bible to give an insight on what actual holy writings (probably) were actually like, if the Earth's pre-event religions resembled what we have there, but then I remembered that Earth in her universe got a lot of sh*t blasted away by supernaturals, including of how religion was actually like back then, so it is kinda silly to assume that holy writings would have survived in something like a basement of a blasted ruin - hell, even quran wouldn't have left much copies in this case. Anyways, enough theological ramble, and let's go to what she is about.*

I do share her anti-capitalist sentiment, but for different reasons, and there is no question that we wouldn't get along further. A bureaucratic manager who supports increased luxuries for commoners? Sounds kinda unusual, but so is the rest of your country. Her personal life is actually well known, which is cool I guess. Now to the juicy stuff - politics. Civil rights, democracy, identity politics? That's kinda cringe bro. In the pro list I only agree with scientific advancement, and partially with luxuries/increased quality of life. Her anti-list is a similar rollercoaster for me, but hey, at least we both dislike em' ancaps and market cappies. Her anti-totalitarian and anti-religious stance is shaped by her world, I know, but we are still at odds. Mind control is pretty based, not gonna lie, pity that we haven't progressed far enough for it neither in magic nor science field. Also, I used to be against corruption too, but then just kinda gave up, and let others handle fight in the regions against it. As for her magic... While magic reappeared a few years ago in our world like Chara after UT genocide-run, I can't comment much on her favorite spells.

"Too much, HM King Christophe II has found himself dealing with Alastair in his lowest moments, and for that I both profusely apologize to him and commend his patience, compassion, and tolerance. He is very mature in making sure Alastair is taken care of and in alerting me to his whereabouts, for he has oft sneaked away during meetings betwixt our leaders, only to be found in strange situations by Margaret and Christophe.

"Now that that particular formality is out of the way, I must ask why you are choosing to annex Tunisia. What is the benefit of this, short-term and long-term? Why have I seen Tunisia's president appear in televisions in your dimension wearing a false smile? I trust you have solid reasons for invading them, Christophe, for wars like this one are what define a monarch's reign. If they do become a puppet state, give them human rights and enough autonomy to retain their culture, but keep in mind what happened to Austria-Hungary...if that even existed in your dimension.

"Your military service is something I do frequently see with modern-day monarchs. While neither Alastair nor I served, we do appreciate those who do; I wonder how being royalty affects one's time in the military, for you surely are not put on dangerous missions, and your compatriots will likely judge you for what you are. Nonetheless, your time serving will help to make you empathize with the men and women on the front lines of your war.

"I am fascinated by your physics degree, on another note, and find gratification in knowing that there is an intellectual on the throne. I trust you are utilizing your degree, Christophe, but not to create more weapons of mass destruction."

"This man has spoken of me before, so I will return him the favor and tell him my thoughts on himself. Then we will be evenly met. He is a drunkard, and I do not say that lightly. He has drunk himself to the brink of death. I have seen many such things among his kind of people. They pursue a single thing that pleases them at the expense of their demands, and they throw themselves away in its pursuit. But, at the same time, I see a good heart in him. He loved his father- perhaps too much, if it was what drove him to this point. So, perhaps his sickness is a gift to him from the Mother, that he will be reminded of his people and will give himself to them with the same devotion he gives his family. Alastair is a good man, I feel, and he may yet learn to rule justly, just as I strive to do so. If he were of my own band I would be honored to ride alongside him. And, by the way, he need not be concerned about my father. He took his revenge for the dishonor the Berghi bastards did him, and he rode home with a hundre."

I have nothing but respect for the Prince-Regent. She has proven herself a capable and proud leader - a gift rare among the monarchs, especially ones of such a young nature. While I'm personally sceptical of her connection to the Swiss Regime and House of Lucerne, a leader does what does what must be done in order to provide for their people.

Jingoism is something I've attempted to curb in my own persona. However, as my ministers have pointed out, the unruly and democratic tendencies of the Swiss often call for harsh and tough treatment. If military discipline is what her people need, I trust in Alexandra's ability as a national teacher.

Well, if you'll excuse my candid attitude, I think I can sum it fairly easily. Stummvoll was born for this role...he really was. I don't like to throw the words 'consummate professional' around lightly, but given the situation, I believe that they're more than justified. In fact, it's my belief that it takes a relatively rare coordination between education, experience, and considerable legislative creativity to be able to translate socioeconomic problems into solutions on the sheer scale and volume with which Stummvoll has succeeded. As an academic myself, I find Stummvoll's unique philosophical views inspiring, and while I am not readily acquainted enough with the particulars of psychobiology to really provide much more, I find his realm of studies quite fascinating, and I look forward to seeing where the universe brings this man professionally in the coming years."

What happens when you cross anime powers and overpowered leaders with furies, all written by a bored Homestuck fan with too much time? Well, you get Rumei. A multiethnic, FT republic with both might and magic that let it conquer the entire Orion Arm.

A 7.6 (this is probably outdated but I can't do the calculations rn) (Tier 9, Level 6, Type 9) according to this index.

Come to The Orion, we got CULTURE and FURRIES

Show Recommendation: Cobra Kai. It is very, very good.

IC Name: Roman Republic, or simply Rome (Rumei). Occasionally called the Ignisian Republic. Current year is 2697.

A dangerous cutie, but a cutie nonetheless, hehe. I am sorry if you don't really like being called that, I should have asked first. Anyway, I hope you have been well! I believe this is the first time we have met on this thread- ERR, I mean, in this place, and I would totally like to make this the most memorable of all! You seem like a pretty fun person, so I am very positive with that. Hey, we could go for a nice walk and talk about deity stuff! Maybeeee smite a place if you are up for it!

"So you are responsible for making those bipedal vermin... Shame on you! Do you realize how troublesome their race has been for my most exceptional liege?!? You should be ashamed for creating a species so stupid as to not recognize his perfection, his neigh divinity! Do you not feel remorse for your crime against The Paramount's most perfect Imperium? What does it say about you that they come from apart of you? Are you just as degenerate as that no good race of malcontents and idiots?!? My opinion is beyond the confines of negative and extending into a level of hate which I did not know I could reach!"

"Ahem, excuse me there I am just passionate about my liege. As for Gwen, she is...strange. Any sensible person with the powers that she supposedly has would have gone back in time and rewrote time in such a way that a true Utopia would be achieved. For example I would've gone back to the dawn of time with The Paramount and a few essentials of our tech level and established the Imperium at the dawn of time so that he could have domion over the universe, perhaps more than that, but instead she goes on trips across space and time. It is an entirely selfless use of the power really, but aside from that we find her fine though I would much prefer an assimilated individual to have her power. My opinion is neutral."
