Trotsky's Status: Closing in on Moscow, leaving a very long trail of blood and bodies from Leningrad to Moscow. Will probably march onto Stalingrad after taking Moscow because 'Stalin' -grad. Damn, that is A LOT of dead people

"So she caves into the demands of others because she follows the phrase, 'As long as it makes you happy'? That is an expression only a peasant who is content with his miserable life can say. Does she think she is a lazy, miserable peasant with no future? If Comrade Lenin saw not just Kasei, but also the people who are under the so-called 'democracy' in her homeland, he would stir them into action, obliterating the corrupt system they were born under. And now, she is made a subordinate to the Vice-President of Stanier, still continuing to live a life that is still full of misery. Had Stanier been another socialist people's utopia, things would be a lot different for her."

"Right now, I shall meet with my comrades, for Moscow is in reach, the time for the people's liberation from Stalin and his stooges is drawing near! I can finally redeem myself for missing Comrade Lenin's funeral because of Stalin, that Сволочи!"
- Comrade General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Mexican Soviet Republic, Leon Trotsky

"Suddenly knowing how to speak more than one line at a time now, huh? Your decision to disregard me is ignorable, but the fact that you support a bloody communist is not. I spent the whole Civil War burying the Reds, it was not easy killing people or watching them die. And there is you here thinking killing more people is anti-corruption and freedom-fighting because you let people whom you didn't kill speak whatever. And I am sure that taking away the regulations that protect consumers will totally benefit your economy, huh? I am hardly sure what you are trying to achieve. Alright, you make prisons better, but at what cost when you dug corporal punishments from medieval era and livestreamed yourself doing them? You reverted your nation to barbarity under the guise of unique simplicity, and I am definitely happy you live on a mountain to where outside people don't want to go. Keep yourself to yourself."

He is lucky, so we might even keep him as a jester for a while his "Steel Stallion" would be given to the road warrior, who would distinguish himself in Chad. Since he has a bad reputation in international community and doesn't know shit about leading troops, this conquest would be a rather safe endeavor. Still... fool he might be, he is not to be underestimated, so we gonna exploit this civil war thing to it's fullest, while battling him and the islamists, since they are to be crused too. Commonplace technology, but it is ideal that the most qualified persons fill the roles, and who is better qualified than someone created to fill the role, down to the genetic level? His political views are similar enough to what I run, though there's a few points where things get pretty fucking stupid. Von Stein's file is decent, but I do have some issues. Most notably, the greasy stain of religion taints him as well, reducing any value he could possibly have to that of a blithering fucking moron. A fetus with only a brain stem is infinitely smarter than anyone who worships a so-called 'god'. I wonder if he would feel the same about all of those views if his little hovel of an 'empire' were forced to assimilate in my empire. It'll be a nice addition to my collection, I'm sure. I'm sure it will give me a damn amusing time."

Yona claims to be the Supreme Ruler of all reality... that seems rather boastful, does it not? Especially given this portal, on which endless amounts of nations from different timelines and universes can communicate. I have communicated with, or observed, many civilizations that are not ruled by this Supreme Ruler of all reality... However, could this be a shame?

While I am a result-oriented person rather than some silly moralist, I cannot but dislike the fact that the sole motivation behind her actions seems to be amusement. Individuals of this type can be unpredictable and prone to rapid changes at every whim, and that's too much chaos to account for in my opinion.

However, I must say, her dedication to science, especially the unbound kind, is admirable. This being understands Wild Science perfectly, and unlike us, she is a conqueror that spreads the idea.

In conclusion, I consider her too potentially erratic to make for a good, reliable ally. However, I still wish her good luck on her multiverse-spanning conquest. Once she turns her attention towards us, a peaceful surrender on our part will be seriously considered.

Vice Archbrain Metron Vektorin

All right, my time to shine. Archbrain Vortis said something about somebody "not being worthy of her time", let's see. A secretary of a Vice-President? I don't blame her. She considers plenty of leaders to be unworthy of her attention. Anyway, Kofuku excels at her job, that's clear after reading the data Archbrain Vortis found on her before realising who she is and calling it quits.

Yeah, as a non-politician, talking about her policies or something like that would be pointless and ridiculous, so I won't do that. Let's focus on her as a person. I don't care about this, neither should anybody who doesn't know her personally, but let's pad this out a bit.

Her obsession with making everyone happy? Maybe that's how people are in Stanier, but here, everybody would just think you're so, so suspicious. What's the point? This woman is just out there, acting as a clown to maintain forced positivity. But. that. is. utter. BULLSHIT!

Sorry about the outburst. You know what? Scratch that. I am not sorry about that outburst. I just hate people like these. When I am angry or sad, the last thing I need is a wide-eyed naïve overgrown child trying to cheer me up with pointless distractions and preventing me to fully concentrate on solving the DAMN PROBLEM THAT MADE ME FEEL LIKE THAT IN THE FIRST PLACE! UN-HO-LY-SHIT! Ugh... these people!

Oh... so that's why. Didn't realise that. Man, that's dark. Really dark. Will I leave out the rant because of this new information? ... No, I'll keep it, it shows the whole train of thought. But I will revoke what I revoked. Sorry about that outburst after all.

I could not consider myself a pacifist, per se, but I am not in favor of war; however, I understand it may be a necessary evil in many cases. 'Tis highly strange he was selected for a leadership role right zen and zere, considering he had no previous experience.

"I strongly detest Stalin, which may seem peculiar on account of his having existed ere my time. But evildoers do not become less evil just because a significant amount of time has passed since their demise. I am zerefore strongly wary of anyone who was favored by Stalin. Mikhail's identifying a cult of personality around Stalin and striving toward what he saw as self-actualization is definitely a strong point in his personal history, as well as one of ze most intriguing.

"'Tis rather interesting how he rejected sticking to a specific ideology, at least for a while. But he and I unfortunately differ on economic policies. His political stance on technocracy seems rather interesting, and I will admit zat I see ze ideology's appeal. Alas, his stance on Euro-communism is one zat will forever separate us idologically.

"Never would I ever, in all my years, ride as a passenger in a vehicle Mikhail is driving. He is, frankly, unhinged when it comes to road laws, and I am terrified by ze fact he may have a driver's license and is roaming freely throughout Kaliningrad and elsewhere. But I do agree with his point on politics not overshadowing ze merit of a literary work. I would be a hypocrite to say I do not enjoy it in moderation, but I do not like zis concept of overpowered... 'protagonist' nations, as he puts it. Were I to guess, Mikhail is an avid reader, something I do respect.

"I suppose my overall opinion on zis man is neutral, all things considered, though I do hope he does not have a--well. A substance problem. Tis an insidious thing, and I do hope--he never ventures down zat path."

"Before I say anything else, a catholic that supports LGBT rights? this is not a man of hypocrisy, this is a man of faith, I'm no Catholic but Jesus would never throw gays in prison or insult them.

You claim to be conservative... But you seem more centrist than conservative. The only conservative thing I see here is your stance on abortion and the monarchy. Maybe you are conservative, but a conservative that uses common sense and adapts to the times. I find all of your views to be alright or tolerable, nothing crazy here.

Soft-spoken leaders are not common and maybe we need more of them and I am definitely not one of them. However you seem to be suffering from depression and drinking too much booze. This may not be the most appropriate thing to say but maybe you should go to Sherechia? like take a month-long vacation here, maybe that could clear up your mind? Take a walk or ride around nature or find somewhere far from civilization where you can clear up your mind, or talk to a Sherechian Folk Religion monk, maybe they can help you? I can be your personal tour guide if you want to.

Also teach me Shakespearean insults PLEASE."
