"So my energy-based friend seems to have taken a shine to me... teatime with holly? im sure i can spare some time for that now that things are relaxing on my end. Also, she is curious about my susceptibility to temperature. She does not need to worry about that. i have chilled out in the coldest places imaginable and even literally had my face infront of Class "O" Stars just to sauna off... so. temperature is perfectly fine with me chuckles. But yes i would most certainly love the idea of visiting and experiencing her home,It is great to finally spend some time with a leader whom is actually so happy and care-free. She was concerned about coming off as creepy with her last opinion, but i really did not mind. Holly is definitely someone to have as a friend when you want to just forget about the seriousness of the universe around you and just be happy and have fun."

"Valentijn, a man whose name and fame resound in the halls of F7. I feel rather unqualified to give an opinion about a man so great and noble, who has reigned over his country with a stern, yet noble and wise hand. It is rather narcissistic to name an entire country on his own name, but apart from that, and his extraordinary weight, age and height, he seems to be an efficient leader. I have learnt that he too, like me, has served in the military, which I find as an excellent trait in any leader, for they know how to handle the toughest of situations. "This High Inspector seems competent enough, the policies he or his masters have seen fit to introduce are quite reasonable, and I admire the level of control his regime possesses over the nation. Too often do I see rulers whom are afraid to take charge over their own people, to interfere with their supposed rights. The High Inspector does not have such weaknesses, and commands the complete and utter obedience of the realm he governs, though perhaps not extending over the Council that put him into power. Nonetheless he wields his authority well, and with purpose. Though is all the mystery and secrecy surrounding him really necessary? I too loathe speeches and fanfare, its all useless commotion to me. But he goes about it in the wrong way, being something of a recluse, never showing his face, displaying no personality or charisma whatsoever. I've seen Als with more character than him. Yet this could be part of the so-called experimental nature of his regime, and is intended to serve a greater purpose. If so, then I hope he gets the results he's looking for. I do believe he possesses great potential, it's indeed a shame that he only gets five years in power. His apparent masters, the Kramashka Council, are in my view, an obstacle. If he wishes to truly succeed as a leader, then he cannot have superiors ordering him about, undermining his own power. When he is able, I'd advise on overthrowing this council so that he can take full, unobstructed control of Dozdcheny. What progress can then be made! Regarding Spokesman Zimarchenko, he seems to be just a lowly security functionary and regime mouthpiece, thereby undeserving of an in-depth opinion of mine."
