For all the hatred NSG gets, I sometimes feel its a bit overexaggerated. People have their opinions and want to defend them, and in today's polarizing world, it's expected that it will be somewhat toxic at times. Although I still dislike NSG though.

What's nsg

NSG - NationStates General. The one where all the OOC / political bits happen.

Though admittedly, there are nicer stuff here and there and it has its shining moments... But for the most parts, well, statistically most of the reports are from NSG spats.

General is just general discussion, it's bound to be toxic at some point.

Arts and Fiction is a nicer branch of the OOCly threads. Though admittedly, things can get heated in Marvel, DC, Star Wars, Star Trek debates.

I'm afraid to check, given that they're almost uniformly uncompleted.

It's also the largest and most active board on this site, so no shit most of the reports in moderation come from NSG, where it's where most of the activity takes place.

There's like 12 million posts in NSG, the second largest board is P2TM and that only has 5.6 million posts. Not even half of what NSG has.

To be absolutely fair, other places with their combined activity won't net too much of a report. F7, NSGP, NSS, P2TM, etc etc. Even Arts and Fiction don't get as much reports compared to the horror that's NSG.

Though admittedly, when other subforums get a mod action, it goes in hard. Predator script and DEN came to mind. It's like tiny everyday NSG spat vs huge nearly game-changing events.

EDIT: Admittedly, the amount of activity in NSG is something to behold. If you look at all the Members and sort by post count, 9 out of 10 of them are from NSG.

Nah. I occasionally look at my factbooks and go "hey this has a few reads/upvotes, that's cool, glad people like this" -- but really I just like writing for writing's sake.

I'd encourage other people on the site to adopt a similar mentality. It's better for your mental fortitude.

Yeah. To be honest, if you write something, work hard on it, then finally look at it -- and think "wow, I really like this", then that's brilliant and you should be happy. And fuck anyone who says otherwise.

(that said, don't reject constructive criticism -- most people are only trying to help!)

cliche: all planets just being the same boring ol' round shape [eh, it's fine if you don't want to do another shape, as that'd be horrifically unrealistic] reason i'm saying this is because i have been planning ideas for not only if a flat earth was real (with the dome and all) and what would happen if you breached that dome in some form, but also for a world consisting of multiple cells of different realities loosely strung together, and going into outer space would make you see a bunch of these different realities with different physics and laws and different types of objects generated by these "physics" intermingling to form one planet (if you can even call it that) i have no idea how i'll make it work but the 'different cells of reality' was actually from, of all things, a youtube comment from a video debunking flat earth sometimes the craziest ideas come from the most mundane of things
