Review of New Transeurasia primary banner:

In seeing this primary banner you know that you're now living in the year 2077, everyone around you speaks in a serious low-tone & deep voice wearing utilitarian dark clothing.

The cities head of security is always in constant turbulence as crime runs these streets of the high-tec low-life atmosphere polluted with smell of burning fumes of long-running heavy working machinery.

Animals and human limbs are now replaced with cybernetic technology and most people like to wear slick sunglasses indoors.

The big mafia corporations bribe the corrupt government to turn a blind eye as they continue to export and sell rare valuable materials in the massive black market trade making several million credit chips in profits annually.

In seeing all of this now that you're living in the year 2077, one small and clear sentence impulsively leaves your lips

"I never asked for this."

Their native peoples probably have a nomadic and pastoral history (and, in some cases, perhaps present as well)
